When to Inflate? Now Said the Taxi Driver Strikes, and Problems Sparks Flying

—By Arthur Brisbane—

A SENATOR who called upon President Roosevelt to discuss inflation to supply a few more dollars, after having created a terrific vacuum with NRA expenditures, etc., reports that the President said he was "waiting to do the inflation in the right way."

At least 50,000,000 Americans, NOT including the note-shaving crowd, whose business is dealing in money, some of whom appear to have access to the President, believe that the "right way" to inflate would be to inflate NOW.

A philosophical New York taxicab driver turned to tell his "fare" bitterly, "That would get your goat. Here I have been driving four hours without picking up a passenger and now a second one calls me and I can't take him. And there is the tax on taxi rides that will have to be paid to make things worse. I see they are afraid to tax the big men in the Stock Exchange."

He was told:

"Tell your taxicab friends they need not make that complaint if they would learn to stick together as Stock Exchange men stick together.

"Of stock brokers there are a few more than one thousand. Of you taxicab drivers there are seventy-five thousand. With your families and friends you might control almost any New York election.

"But you split up on election day. Financial gentlemen never split up, never forget friends, forgive enemies. Imitate them."

Policemen and taxicab drivers are workmen. The policeman, in cheerful, cold blood, hands the taxi driver a summons that means the loss of a day's work and a fine that means hardship.

And they all wonder why they don't amount to much in the total scheme of things. Gentlemen of high finance do not "bawl each other out" or crowd each other. They know better. That is why they are in high finance. As a rule they were not born there.

Strikes multiply. All tool makers and die makers in Detroit vote to strike, bakery drivers striking in Philadelphia, upset wagons, striking miners are marching to picket the Carnegie Steel plant, with heavily armed police following and watching.

Government can tell the one "big man," head of an industry, what he shall do about payrolls, hours, wages. It is not so easy to tell the millions of individual workers.

You cannot indict a whole industry.

Employers that signed NRA codes, expecting happiness, peace and plenty, are puzzled, as they walk and wonder, inside of gates picketed by strikers.

The strikers shout, "Bootleg wages and unfair tactics."

The employers reply that the workers make demands that go beyond limits fixed by NRA codes.

It is a difficult problem for General Johnson and his hard-working assistants. Easy to lead a horse to the NRA water; hard to make him drink.

Russia and Germany become gradually more unfriendly, unpleasant sparks flying. Russia has expelled German newspaper correspondents, not liking what they write. Berlin protests to the Russian government. Before Russia acted Germany had arrested Russian correspondents covering the Reichstag arson trial with much sympathy for the accused Communists. Russia also has a grave dispute with Japan, and Germany with Mussolini, who is "showing great patience."

Ring Lardner's death is a serious loss to intelligent newspaper work, and to useful citizenship. In a nation more easily influenced by satire than by invective, he did great good, exposing shams of various kinds. And what is more important, he was a man of really fine talent. His death is a national misfortune.

When an editor wants to emphasize his meaning he can only underscore words or print them in big type. Japan's army has a better emphasis. It warned Peiping authorities that Gen. Fang must withdraw from the non-military zone in North China.

Escort Flees Injured Girl in Blazing Car

VICTIM SAVED BY HERO IN WALTHAM CRASH

Drags Her From Wreck Vanishes Without Claiming Credit

An unsung hero for 10 hours, Arthur Imhoff, 22, of 34 Crescent st., Waltham, came forward for treatment of burns on his hands today to explain how he saved the life of Miss Irene Armitage, 24, after she had been deserted by her companion in a flaming car after a midnight accident.

Police took her to the hospital, where her condition was critical for hours. Her right arm hung by a shred of flesh and the girl, recovering consciousness, refused absolutely to permit doctors to amputate it. Later, when told that she could not live unless it were amputated, she gave permission.

She also suffered a fractured right leg and three fractured ribs.

While Imhoff was making his disclosures, surgeons at Waltham Hospital were amputating the girl's right arm, and the alleged driver of the car in which she was left to burn to death was being arraigned on charges of drunken driving, leaving the scene and having a loaded revolver in his possession.

The car struck a pole in Wheeler ave., Waltham, and burst into flames. Police found Miss Armitage, of 701 Moody st., lying in the roadway and believed she had been tossed out.

They arrested William O'Brien of Langley rd., Brighton, in the rear room of a nearby store where he was washing his hands, and charged him with being the driver.

Imhoff, police learned when he appeared for treatment, was first on the scene. Found Miss Armitage alone, trapped in the burning machine. He dragged her clear and left her in the street while he ran for aid.

O'Brien was arraigned and held in $1000 for hearing Oct. 3.

Man Killed When He Fails to See Truck

Gloucester, Sept. 27—Stephen Caig, 46, of Maplewood ave., was crushed to death today beneath wheels of an oil truck at Orchard and Summer sts., when he failed to notice the truck backing toward him.

The victim, employed by the city water department, was working with a shovel as the oil-covered truck, operated by Sidney Merchant of Rumford st., backed out of Orchard st. Caig was struck and felled, the rear wheel passing over his head.

Balbo to Lead Armada to Moscow

Moscow, Sept. 27 (INS)—Marshal Italo Balbo, Italian air chief who led his seaplane armada across the Atlantic from Italy to Chicago and back, plans to head the armada on a flight to Moscow, according to reports received here today.

According to present plans, the Italian airmen will make the flight during October.

PATIENT DIES IN ASYLUM FIGHT

Danvers, Sept. 27—Alfred Corbett, 45, of Horn ave., Medford, a patient in the State Hospital here, died Sunday of acute appendicitis and internal injuries, it was revealed today. The injuries were attributed to a scuffle with an attendant.

Dr. Clarence A. Bonner, superintendent of the hospital, said today he had notified Medical Examiners S. Chase Tucker of Peabody, Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Cregg of Salem and State Detective William Murray.

All agreed on the cause of death, he said, after they had interviewed John Buckley, of Lynn, the attendant who was forced to battle Corbett.

Buckley said Corbett came toward him with a shovel. In the ensuing struggle, both rolled down a 40-foot embankment onto a pile of rocks. That evening Corbett developed appendicitis. He died the next day. Buckley suffered a dislocated back.

Lawlor Branded 'Hitler' by Silverman for Bolting

"Hitler Lawlor" was the characterization given today by Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman to his assistant, Henry E. Lawlor, last Sunday shook Boston political circles by announcing his support of Frederick W. Mansfield for mayor.

Lawlor, who gets his $6800 appointment to Mayor Curley, opposed four years ago by Mansfield declared in his announcement that he probably would lose his post for his temerity, but Silverman denied that today.

"Hitler Lawlor," said the latter, "can stay here at the law department as long as he does his work properly. I'm not concerned with the present political situation."

Asked to explain his "Hitler" characterization, Silverman said:

"Several months ago Mr. Lawlor wrote a letter to a Boston attorney, in which he stated that Adolph Hitler was right in his treatment of the Jews.

"Complaints were made to my office. I asked him for an explanation, Lawlor said that he didn't understand what he was writing about.

"A certain element in the community wanted him removed then because of his bias. I didn't take any action then and I don't expect to now."

MAYBERRY ON STAND SOBS OF SHAME

Lawyer Denies Fixing Jurors as Mystery Witness Dies

Lowell A. Mayberry, young Boston attorney, broke down and wept today on the witness stand in the Supreme Court, as he defended himself against the charge of jury-fixing, on which allegation his disbarment is sought.

The hearing, which attracted a capacity crowd of leading lawyers, had to be held up while he wiped his eyes and regained his composure.

Mayberry broke down while telling of his unsuccessful efforts to obtain a chance to face his accusers and cross-examine them before Dunbar F. Carpenter, the special bar examiner, who recommended his disbarment.

DREADED DISGRACE

"Mr. Carpenter said I would have full opportunity to do that before the Supreme Court," said Mayberry.

"I told him I had no doubt of getting a fair hearing before this court, but in the meantime the disgrace coming on me and my father and family would be tremendous, and when it was all over and I was cleared, I would be like the patient who died though the operation was successful."

As today's session of the disbarment hearing started, word was received of the death this morning at Cambridge City Hospital of Michael Leonard, one of the four men who had been labeled "missing witnesses" in this case.

Leonard, an important witness according to the prosecution, failed to respond to a summons to appear at the hearing and a capias was issued for his arrest.

DONNELLY HIS EMPLOYE

Deputy Sheriff Fred Beal of Middlesex County found Leonard at a house in Harvard st., Cambridge, on Monday. But the man was ill and was sent to the hospital by Dr. George A. Conner, whom Beal called. Death was due to pneumonia.

He was firm in his denial of

Cook Deserts Coakley Fight to Win Back Place at Bar

Alonzo B. Cook, former state auditor and one of three Republican candidates for mayor, today withdrew his endorsement of Daniel H. Coakley's petition for reinstatement to the Massachusetts bar.

"Daniel H. Coakley, over the radio last night, stated that his opponents for mayor of Boston did not have the courage to take a stand either for against his reinstatement at the bar. I take that stand here and now.

"My signing of a card supporting his reinstatement several months ago was based solely on personal sympathy, but any attempt to use my name, even by inference, in support of his candidacy for mayor would certainly be ill-advised.

"Coakley is not a man to occupy the mayor's chair in City Hall and if what he desires now is an expression from me as to where I, as a candidate, stand in the matter of his reinstatement, I publicly announce that I withdraw my endorsement and oppose his reinstatement at the bar."

AGENT SHOT IN DRESS STRIKE

One man was shot today during a west end riot in a South End dress manufacturing establishment as striking garment workers allegedly attempted to force a walkout in the plant.

Meyer Karensky, who gave an address in Harvard st., Dorchester, and was said by police to be a union agent, received a bullet in the left foot from the gun of Louis Lerner, proprietor of the shop, at 786 Washington st.

The wound was not serious and after treatment at City Hospital, Karensky was discharged.

Lerner told police that Karensky and several other men entered the shop and began talking about pulling his workers out on the strike. Karensky threatened him, Lerner said, and a fight ensued in which others joined.

The manufacturer said that to protect himself he fired a shot at the floor which hit Karensky.

Police said they would seek warrants charging Karensky with threatening and Lerner with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Speeding Society Wife Is Fined, Loses License

For the next 30 days Mrs. Beatrice Dabney, 26 year old Dover society matron and wife of a wealthy stock broker, will do nothing to add to her family record of three convictions for speeding.

Both Mrs. Dabney and her husband, Frederick Dabney, 32, in Newton court today were found guilty of speeding, but the wife was one up on her husband and loses her license for 30 days.

Dabney, who was convicted for the second time, will no doubt drive more carefully for the next month at least. Both were fined $25.

Mrs. Dabney's second offense was last June, when she was stopped on the Worcester Turnpike by Motorcycle Officer William H. Reading. Before a summons could be served on her she sailed for Europe. On Sept. 11, immediately after her return, she was again stopped for speeding, and on Sept. 25 was fined $25. The June offense, which was really her second, was fined $50 today.

At the same time her husband, who was also hailed on the Worcester Turnpike, was fined $25 for a second offense for speeding, which occurred Sept. 13, two days after his wife's arrest.

COUNCIL TOLD CHARGES ARE BASELESS

Fin. Com. Chairman Demands Showdown Before Council

BULLETIN

Governor Ely notified Frank A. Goodwin, chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, shortly before noon today that he would remove him from that post because of his activities in the current Brockton shoe strike, which the Governor attributes directly to Goodwin's activities. Goodwin will remain as a member of the commission.

Frank A. Goodwin, chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, today demanded a showdown on Gov. Ely's charge that he was a "labor racketeer," despite the governor's apparent effort to let the matter die down.

As the Governor's Council convened in the State House it received from Goodwin an open letter dated yesterday, in which he reiterated his demand for a public hearing on Ely's accusations.

Although the Governor threatened Goodwin with an "ouster" hearing last Saturday, he said yesterday he knew of no reason why Goodwin should appear before the council today or why his name should enter the discussions.

Goodwin's letter to the council follows:

"There seems to be an impression abroad that you are to give me a hearing tomorrow on charges that have been made against me. I have not been notified of any such hearing. On Friday morning of last week there appeared in a Boston paper a slanderous attack upon me by the governor.

"He said: 'I have noticed over a period of two years that the gentleman who is responsible for the trouble in the shoe industry in Brockton is also interested in some kind of an organization in which the members pay dues in which he may profit.'

"Asked if he proposes to remove Goodwin, the account went on, the governor said: 'I certainly will, if he does not quit the business of labor racketeering.'

"He also said: Last year he was collecting $1 a head from State employees to further their interests. He wants to collect from the shoe workers of Brockton.'

"I immediately branded these statements as false and concluded my answer with the following:

"These charges he has made against me are serious and he should either withdraw them or present them to the Governor's Council where I may have a chance to defend myself. These statements in an open public hearing.

"I cannot see how he can resist the call for a hearing and if he prefers the latter, I shall be ready to appear on any date you may set."

"SILVER SHIRTS" SCRAMBLE PROPHETS FOR PROFITS

New Empire Idea Jabbed With Philosophical Hash to Appeal to Mentally Backward Christians

The high command of the Silver Shirts—the 1933 version of the Ku Klux Klan—did not carry all its eggs in one basket.

Apparently, William Dudley Pelley, former Boston newspaperman and now prophet of the theocratic government that will control these United States in 1945, realized that the old game of Jew-baiting is not what it used to be.

PHILOSOPHY IS HASH

With press and radio telling them of the nauseating activities of Herr Hitler and his ilk, rustics in the hinterlands of America are changing their mental outlook. They no longer "fall" for the acute stories of the "Jewish monarchy" and the "foreign potentate who is about to seize our government."

Perhaps the Silver Shirt recruiting officers reloaded these time-worn lies just to be sure to get the $10 bills of the few persons who still believed them, but certainly anti-Semitism is not their chief stock in trade.

They have found a more popular appeal to the mentally backward. Realizing that the public appetite for the supernatural to the superstitiously-minded, they have concocted a grand mess of spiritism and religion and clairvoyance.

To make it even more timely and appealing, they have added a liberal dash of pseudo-economics. If the whole country could work itself into a lather over Technocracy, why not try to sell a little of that at $10 a throw?

JEWS WELCOME WIT - $10

The result is Pelley's "Christ Government," a gigantic corporation in which each citizen will be a stockholder, entitled to clothes, food and air as well as an annual dividend. Here is a scheme that solves all the world's economic ills even more effectively than the scheme of Technocrat Scott.

And, if you take Pelley's own word for it, his plan is no economic theory or experiment. It is inevitable fact, "claimed" is revealed to him from on high. It is useless to rail against it or to poke fun at it. The "Christ Movement" is coming with a certainty greater than that of Death or Taxes. And for $10 you can get "on the ground floor."

Even the much-attacked Jews are given a chance—despite a statement by Arthur Ajax, provost commander for Massachusetts, that the "Silver Shirts" would not make the mistake of the Klan and let Jews in to undermine the organization. Pelley, the national commander, himself announced that they can become members of the new state by being "naturalized"—and paying $10, it is presumed.

But it is to be doubted if he expects many of them to accept his conditions. He spends most of his efforts in impressing those who lend an appreciative ear to his psychic-economic hokum.

"PLAN" IS SCRAMBLED

"For 48 months I have been tutored steadily in the most minute phases of the type of social and economic administration which the American people are going to embrace between Jan. 31, 1933 and March 4, 1945," he said.

"Just as I was given the Esoteric Doctrines of the Liberation Enlightenment in a fashion until the picture was complete, whereupon the Voice started to dictate the Liberation Scripts in order and continuity, so the training in the Higher Political Economy has proceeded, and now begins to appear in orderly exposition."

It is to listen to this prophet that "harassed Christian Protestants" are invited to pay $10 the year. There are not many in Massachusetts who are willing to pay for that kind of economic and spiritual salvation.

Utilities Board Member Accused

Frank H. Sullivan, of Wabanpetitioner for a reduction in the rates of the Edison Electric Co. of Boston, created a furore at the State House rate hearing when he accused Abraham G. Webber, acting chairman of the commission, refused to allow Sullivan to introduce a man who would swear he heard Webber make the request. Sullivan secured the compiling of ratin delays by failure to furnish data he demanded a year ago.

Miss Leroy, although famous for her silken roles on the screen, has had much drama in real life. She left a film company flat and walked home because a director wanted her to wear scanty attire in a picture, a costume that she considered indecent. She further emphasized her refusal to play the part in real life that she plays on the screen by slapping the heavy in her next picture, when that in make love to her when the camera wasn't grinding.

Miss Leroy and Mr. Hershfield—who is a well known actor's agent—have quarreled before and fussed and made up. But this time friends say this is a permanent separation which may end in the divorce court.

Woman Silent in Death Attempt

Her name on the danger list at the City Hospital, police questioned a woman who said she is Francis A. Kelly, 23, of Washington st., South End, refused to give police any explanation of her attempt to end her life yesterday.

The woman, well-dressed and apparently prosperous, collapsed in front of the Warren ave. police station. Just before she fell, officers saw her drink a bottle of poison. She was unconscious when they reached her side.

After treatment at the City Hospital, she again refused to give her name. A police checkup has failed to reveal any relatives in the city.

Winthrop Ordered to Revise Books

A revision of bookkeeping systems in the town of Winthrop was suggested by the State Auditor yesterday after examination of town books disclosed laxity in keeping of the accounts.

The state audit reveals the town has been paying salaries of two officials without authority; that payment for lots in the town cemetery is irregular, that cemetery board does not know how much is owed, that cancelled securities are not filed in the cemetery department and therefore the auditors had difficulty determining the town's debt.

PUT IDLE CASH TO WORK, PLAN OF ROOSEVELT

Credit Expansion on Large Scale Taken Up in New York

New York, Sept. 27—President Roosevelt, preparing to go to his home town, Hyde Park, today, confident of the National Recovery drive success, was ready to lay down terms for putting credit to work on a large scale.

A series of talks with financial leaders convinced his advisers that he was about to make known his desires for expanding credit through regular channels as the alternative to outright currency inflation.

Welcomed by a crowd that swarmed over his route from Pennsylvania station, Mr. Roosevelt remained last night and early today at the family residence, 49 East 65th st.

STRAUS LONE CALLER

One caller alone was received—Jesse I. Straus, ambassador to France. This was viewed as meaning that France was considering making the defaulted war debt payments to the United States.

The immediate object of the President's visit here was a family reunion and "bon voyage" to his eldest son, James, who sailed at midnight for Europe with his wife, the former Betsy Cushing of Boston.

They are going to London and Paris on a trip described as a vacation. There is speculation whether they will go to Russia.

Immediately after luncheon today, the President was to depart by motor for the family residence at Hyde Park, 75 miles up the Hudson.

There he will keep watch on the national recovery drive and outline his ideas for putting idle cash in bond issues and financing and deposits to work to support his price-lifting campaign.

POLICE HUNT OUTSIDE AIDS OF STATE PRISON EMBEZZLER

INMATES FEAR LOSS OF $800 IN WAGES

Swindle Kept Secret by Officials in Hope of Restitution

State police today were seeking accomplices of George W. Gordon, imprisoned embezzler, who was given the prisoners' wage fund to handle at State prison in Charlestown and stole $800.

While Gordon has confessed, he has refused to name his outside aids who cashed counterfeit payment orders, but officials claim to have good clues as to who they are.

Gordon not only "cracked" a supposedly fool-proof system at the prison, but used the same method of juggling accounts that he used in embezzling $500,000 from a big steamship company, Warden Hogsett revealed.

Reports that political influence led to Gordon's being given the job of handling the prison fund were denied.

REMOVED FROM JOB

Gordon, who confessed two weeks ago to looting the prison fund, a fact kept secret by officials until today, was not removed from the job until this morning.

Warden Hogsett said he would decide on punishment before the day was over. The delay in action against Gordon revived rumors of "outside influence."

The warden, however, explained he had been waiting for the restitution that Gordon had promised. If restitution were made, the plan of state officials apparently was to leave Gordon on his fund job and keep the whole matter a permanent secret.

STATE MUST PAY

Even the prisoners did not know about it until today, according to Warden Hogsett, who scoffed at reports they might attack Gordon.

"The state will have to restore good money to the prisoners, and the prisoners will know that," said Warden Hogsett.

As restitution was not made, Gordon was told to stay in his "room" as prison officials call the cells, and remain there today for punishment to be decided upon.

It is possible the warden may go before the grand jury and have the prisoner indicted.

Gordon is serving 9 to 13 years, a sentence imposed in 1928. By his embezzlement he showed he knew a lot about accounts. So he was assigned to handling the prisoners' wage fund, on which the inmates at Charlestown draw orders from time to time for mailing to their families.

GORDON'S METHODS

Gordon drew counterfeit orders and had them approved at the prison office. These were mailed out. By secreting some of his card records at the end of each month he was able to show a balance in his accounts.

Since the juggling was discovered, the then-inmate chief clerk, a veteran of long service and experience, has checked up on Gordon daily while he remained on the job.

Chairman Charles P. Howard, of the commission on administration and finance, said the theft was reported to him two weeks ago by Warden Hodgett. He declared he had not made the matter public because of the small amount of money involved. He also stated that the state was liable for the money and would make good the loss. He said the prisoners would lose nothing.

Luckless Love -:- Her Nemesis

MRS. EMILY W. COBB

Mr. Cobb, Freed as Slayer, in Love Theft

Mrs. Emily Roberts Cobb, 28, attractive blonde Mansfield matron and former Sunday school teacher, absolved, in 1931, of the shot-gun murder of her husband, Justin L. Cobb, Jr., was today in the toils of the law again.

This time she was charged with carrying on a romance with James T. Quigley, married Brockton druggist.

Mrs. Cobb and Quigley were allegedly found together and arrested by raiding officers put on their trail in Duxbury by Quigley's wife, Mrs. Flora D. Quigley, proprietress of a Bridgewater inn. They face Plymouth court on statutory charges today.

DIVORCE IS SOUGHT

Mrs. Quigley has filed suit for divorce, naming Mrs. Cobb and charging also that Quigley is addicted to excessive drinking.

The tragedy which first brought golden-haired Mrs. Cobb into the limelight occurred in November, 1931, when young Cobb, son of a wealthy Mansfield banker, was found dying in a pool of blood, with a broken shotgun by his side.

According to police, Cobb attempted to write in blood the accusation: "Emily did it." Investigation, after Cobb's death, showed a quarrel took place between husband and wife and that Mrs. Cobb was injured in a scuffle.

FREED BY JURY

Mrs. Cobb told police her husband had flown into a rage when she helped herself to liquor. She claimed the tragic drinking bout's participants had included one of the Cobb household's maids to whose charms her husband had succumbed and to whom she had for months been compelled to "play second fiddle." Mrs. Cobb is the mother of two children.

POLICE RUSH 70 MILES ON NEW CAHILL TIP

"Looks Pretty Good," They Say, Despite Flood of Hoax Clues

Detectives and police rolled over the road in a joint 70 miles south of Boston today on a new tip regarding the whereabouts of Harry P. Cahill, accused as the slayer of 16-year-old Peggy McCarthy of Somerville.

Although incensed over what they term hoax telephone tips, which have kept them chasing endlessly, the investigators said that the newest one today "looks pretty good," and they ordered on their trip to corner and question two strange men who have been lingering in a camp colony for a week.

SUSPECT HELD HERE

While the investigators were headed toward the south of Boston, police here received word that a man who resembled Cahill had registered in a Huntington ave. lodging house in the Back Bay.

A dozen Boston police, heavily armed, were rushed to the address and there took into custody a man who had registered as William H. Harrison of Wells River Junction, Vt. At Back Bay station, however, he said his name was Philip J. Brown and that he had no home.

Although police said he did not follow Cahill's description on the circular sent out by Somerville police, they decided to hold him as a suspicious person pending investigation.

Meanwhile today traps were laid in an attempt to catch the hoaxers who have been giving false tips over the telephone to police.

NO CLUE DISREGARDED

Most such calls have been received by Lawrence police, who are co-operating with the police of Somerville and Cambridge, state detectives and authorities of Essex and Dorchester Counties in the hope of a quick solution of the strangle murder.

So intense has the discouraging hunt become that no clue is disregarded and delay through hoax calls causes a decided hindrance, police pointed out.

High hopes were raised through one of the legitimate calls but they were soon dashed when a pair of child's shoes, similar to those missing from the feet of the little victim, were reported in the Squantum section of Quincy.

MYSTERY MAN

Being worn and of the same size as those worn by Peggy, the shoes were reported by Mrs. John R. Nelson, Squantum real estate operator, who recalled that a mystery man inquired about rental of a secluded cottage shortly before the shoes were found.

Police Chief Thomas Dumery and Lieut. Inspector Daniel O'Connell, of Somerville, hurried to Quincy but found the shoes were of patent leather while those of the McCarthy girl were of dull leather.

Other clues, none of which amounted to anything, were run down in various sections of New England, including one in Maine.

STATE BOARD TO CALL TWO IN BEER PROBE

Mayor Duane of Waltham Urges Corrective Measures

Members of the State Alcoholic Beverages commission today acquired and kept closely guarded the names of two citizens who furnished Rep. Roland D. Sawyer of Ware the information that led to the solon's charges of "shocking conditions" in beer gardens of Boston, Worcester ar Springfield.

It was the first move of the commission toward an investigation of charges that included statements that told of drunkenness and hilarity in licensed bee places by girls who ranged in age as low as 14.

DUANE LAUDS DRIVE

While the commission moved toward further questioning of the two citizens, Rep. Sawyer's charges were augmented by statements of Mayor Patrice J. Duane of Waltham that cited "conditions in certain places as bad as they were prior to the enactment of The Eighteenth Amendment."

Mayor Duane, always a strong advocate of repeal, said he made his statement in the hope that corrective measures would be taken when liquor returns.

"Young girls and boys dancing at these places are encouraged to drink beer when they get dry," Mayor Duane said.

"This should not be, in fact, there are too many events occurring under the sale of 3.2 beer which are taking on the character of those things which saved the citizens, disgusted at the way in which the sale of liquor was handled, to put the 18th amendment on the law books."

NO COMPLAINTS HERE

In comment on the Sawyer charges, Secretary Louis Eppie of the Boston Licensing Board said he had received no complaints, official or otherwise, from the beer gardens of Boston.

"Should such violations of the law be reported to us, we would immediately revoke the licenses, following investigation," he said.

Drama Gives -:- Heir Thrills

RUTH EASTON

WILLIAM HARRIGAN SIGOURNEY THAYER

Thayer Heir Lives His Fun in Puppet World

Sigourney Thayer, swashbuckling adventurer, is sorry for folks whose humdrum lives can't be brightened by world wars, oil booms, and island insurrections.

He's been a little sorry, in fact, for his workaday self all through temporarily at least, with the exceptions and romances and occasional forays into gambling and irrepressible younger years.

HIS IDEA OF "KICK" PLAY

That's why Sigourney Thayer, Boston social registerite and son of wealth, is sweating out a career for himself in the business of producing and directing stage plays. And that's why Sigourney Thayer, who, by means of his "marionette" home town, with what he characterizes as "diffidently as I can," is presenting low-brow detective dramas, Karel Theyer Tregoning Thayer Charles Chan.

There's plenty of zest in Inspector Charlie Chan," Sigourney Thayer announces of his latest production, which opens this fall at the Repertory theatre. "Besides the adequate assortment of synthetic ones into the footlight version of the Biggers novel of the murder of lovely Kiku Luoluan in a mountain mansion house secluded apparently for no one but four of her former husbands.

"Detective plays, like detective fiction, seize your interest by piquing your curiosity," Sigourney Thayer explained today. "You aren't obliged to go into a mental huddle attempting to argue the plausibility of the plot. You've got your sleuth. There's bound to be a note-book for the reader and the killer. A man-hunt means thrills. And thrills are good for folks who, in the course of their normal affairs, don't get enough of them."

OWN CAREER COLORFUL

Producer Director Thayer, blackhaired, reddened, and considerably more than six feet tall, dares neither to offer references concerning his personal qualifications as a prescription of thrills as remedies for worry and care and boredom, for exposition of his "kick-dispensing methods in his chosen field of work, he avoided direct mention of highlights of his own colorful youth, including front page publicity about pranks at Amherst College, distinguished service as a flier with the A. E. F. during the World War, during post-war Western cattle ranches, diplomatic missions in Uncle Sam's little-known Caribbean possessions, and exuberant whoopee-making in Paris.

All these thrills now long past and gone, though still regarded for posterity in files of yellowish newspapers, Sigourney Thayer today ignored.

REVERE MAN IS DYING AFTER SHOOTING

Assailant Held, Says Victim Threatened Him With Knife

A Revere man suffered wounds that may cause his death in a shooting affray following an argument with a friend near his home early today.

The dying man, who is under treatment at Massachusetts General Hospital, is Rocco Framo 30, of Quincy st., Revere. He is suffering from shotgun wounds in the legs and abdomen and loss of blood.

Framo was found lying in a pool of blood in a shack. Police say he named Champerchio as the man who shot him.

Camperchio is said to have admitted the shooting, readily claiming self-defense after Framo attacked him with a knife.

According to the police story of the incident, Framo and Camperchio had become involved in an argument near Framo's home.

Camperchio, in his story to police, claimed that Framo finally drew a knife and attacked him. He said he fled and rushed into his house for a double-barreled shotgun. As Framo rushed at him he fired both barrels.

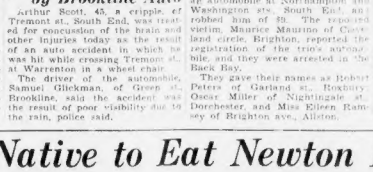
Must Be Native to Eat Newton Parmesan



Italians on the Newton welfare list, who recently requested that grated cheese for their macaroni be included in the weekly food dole, will not be given any grated cheese for macaroni, it was decided today.

In fact, they will not be given any cheese at all.

But they will get flour with which they can make a nice cake.

Separate food lists for Americans and Italians were announced today by Mrs. Florence S. Fitzgerald, director of public welfare, as a result of protests that the single list contained food not adapted or relished in common by both nationalities. There was some agitation for a third list for French families, but it was finally decided the French would have to make their choice between two lists, which were prepared by the state department of public health.

Mrs. Fitzgerald said that grated Parmesan cheese, as requested by the Italians for their macaroni, comes under the head of luxury and cannot be included. Singularly enough, the American list includes one-half pound of cheese, ungrated, weekly, while the Italians, if they want their grated cheese, must subscribe for the American list and grate their own, for there is no cheese of any kind on theirs.

Both lists contain bread, four loaves weekly for American couples; five for Italian. But in addition there will be eight pounds of flour per month for each. Mrs. Fitzgerald said this was included for cake.

Here is the list for American couples: (weekly) 5 qts. milk, 1 can evaporated milk, 6 lbs. potatoes, 2 lbs. cabbage, 2 lbs. beets, 1 lb. squash, 1 lb. prunes, 2 cans tomatoes, ½ doz. oranges, 1 doz. eggs, ½ lb. cheese, 1 lb. oatmeal, 2 lbs. macaroni, ½ lb. butter, ½ lb. lard, 1½ lbs. sugar, ½ pt. molasses, ½ lb. peanut butter, 1 lb. dried beans, ½ lb. coffee, 4 loaves bread, two white, two dark, 1 bar laundry soap, 1 bar bath soap (monthly) 8 lbs. flour, ½ lb. tea, ½ lb. cocoa, 1 box salt, 1 box soda.

There is no "or" in either list.

The Italian list is the same except that the potatoes are omitted to 3 lbs.

There are 2 lbs. escarole instead of beets and 1 lb. onions instead of squash; 2½ lbs. of macaroni; 2 lbs. of sugar; 1 lb. Italian beans instead of dried beans; 5 loaves of bread instead of 4; no lard but 2 qts. oil monthly; no molasses, peanut butter or coffee.

Three hundred and twenty families on the welfare and soldiers relief lists will receive this food list instead of money. The proportions are increased where there are children in the families.

FULLER-INNES SPLIT OVER MAYOR IMPERILS G. O. P.

Lieut.-Gov. Bacon Is Put "On Spot" in Battle Between Parkman and Nichols in City Race

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

The state G. O. P., howled over by President Roosevelt last November and twice shattered by Gov. Ely, is in a blue funk over the Boston mayoralty scrap.

Hopes to regain the State next fall are being shot to pieces, it is feared, with two wings of the party bitterly divided over the mayoralty candidacies of Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., and former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols.

Former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller, flirting with the governorship job, is solidly behind Parkman while Lt. Gov. Gaspar G. Bacon, titular leader, and in line for his chance for the big chair on Beacon Hill, has yet to say publicly where he stands.

BACON IS WARD POWER

It is feared that the lieutenant governor will find it difficult to stay out of the Boston contest because of the fact that he is a voter here and a power in normally Democratic Ward 19 in Jamaica Plain. Bacon is regarded as friendly with Charles H. Innes and would be expected to favor the Nichols candidacy under ordinary circumstances.

Eight years ago, Ward 19 gave Nichols 4287 votes out of a total of 9104 cast for the 10 mayoralty candidates in the race at that time.

If Bacon should elect to remain neutral, a big Nichols vote in that ward again this year will be interpreted by Parkman's friends as an indication of Bacon's secret choice.

Whichever way the lieutenant-governor turns, the path promises to be a thorny one.

LIST THINS DOWN

By going with Parkman, he could undoubtedly take a lot of thunder away from former Governor Fuller but would incur the hostility of the Innes group which has state-wide power. On the other hand, aside from the Fuller angle, Parkman has many friends in his party throughout the state, who would be sure to register their resentment in the primary next fall, if Bacon should go with Nichols.

The situation is anything but pleasing to many of the Republican leaders and is causing them a lot of lost sleep.

Further heightening the interest in the Ward 19 vote was the indorsement of Frederick W. Mansfield's candidacy, which came today from Rep. William C. Dolan, another power in the district. Dolan gained considerable attention this year when he preferred charges against Judge Arthur P. Stone of East Cambridge Court.

Final time for filing nomination papers at City Hall saw the big list of mayoralty candidates who were in the field pared down to nine. Of course six are Democrats and three, Republicans. Until Oct. 24 the final date for withdrawals, no change in this lineup is looked for. But if the Good Government Association should endorse a candidate before that time, it is possible that one Democrat will decide not to make a go of it some other time.

Those in the race now are: Former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols, Frederick W. Mansfield, Dist. Atty. William J. Foley, Judge Michael H. Sullivan, Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., School Committeeman William A. Reilly, Daniel H. Coakley and former State Auditor Alonzo B. Cook.

Cook, Nichols and Parkman are Republicans, although party designations are not used because under the law the election is a non-partisan one.

COOK UNDER WIRE

Of the nine candidates, four—O'Connell, Nichols, Mansfield and Foley—have the necessary number of names certified to put them on the ballot by the election commission. All of the others have thousands more names filed than required and are practically sure of having no trouble.

Until about five minutes of closing time, it looked as if Cook would not make the grade. But he was near the head of the long line of fillers at the election department windows and plunked down not only enough papers to bring his count to the required 3000 but a couple of extra thousand names for good measure.

Although 18 took out papers for the two vacancies on the school committee only 12 filed. They are Marius V. P. Caputo, Alfred Santosuosso, Frederick R. Sullivan, Helen G. Cannon, Dr. Joseph V. Lyons (former school committeeman), Cornelius W. O'Connell, Mrs. Cornelia G. McMahan, John J. Mahoney, Ralph H. Colson, Miriam C. Regan, John F. Cullen and Jacob Goldberg.

Most of the list filed a large number of excess papers, but a few may not qualify when the election commissioners get through with certifying the names. One candidate in particular, in doubt, it was given out, is Goldberg. The commissioners have until Oct. 18 to complete the task of certification.

GLYNN FOR REILLY

Mrs. Mary E. Gallagher, employe of the city welfare department, only woman to take out papers, failed to put in an appearance and Street Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn publicly announced his intention not to file.

Both of these events were predicted with the arrival of Mayor Curley in the city from Chicago. Glynn is expected to endorse William A. Reilly, who, according to the political wiseacres, is being backed by the mayor.

Some of Mrs. Gallagher's friends were saying today that the mayor did not take her out of the contest and that the reason she took out papers was to block off the possible candidacy of Mrs. Jennie Loitman Barron.

How many candidates there will be in the battle for the 22 council seats will not be known for some days, as the election officials could give little information as to how many had gotten under the wire. For these 22 places, approximately 250 had taken out papers.

COAKLEY FLAYS BAR

Daniel H. Coakley, in a radio address delivered over Station WNAC, vigorously flayed the Boston Bar Association, charging it with injecting into the contest the question of his petition for reinstatement in the bar. He asserted that the bar association had violated all precedent by giving publicity to its action for the purpose of hurting his candidacy for mayor.

He charged that George R. Nutter, of the Bar Association counsel, and one of the leaders of the Good Government Association, was associated with the law firm which represented Godfrey Cabot of the Waten and Ward Society, when charges were brought against him 12 years ago.

Coakley asked the other mayoral candidates to state their position on the action of the Bar Association, since they are all lawyers.

Former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, at outdoor rallies in South Boston, predicted the withdrawal of the mayoralty candidates within the next few days.

He predicted that the contest will narrow down to a battle between himself, the "unbossed Democrat," and Parkman, "who will be the rubber stamp of the Good Government Association."

NEW YORK CITY ROOSEVELT TO SHY 72 MILLION OPPOSE BONUS

New York, Sept. 27 (AP)—Faced with default of municipal obligations, in immediate need of $25,000,000 for the Friday payroll, and outmaneuvered on their stock tax program by the New York Stock Exchange, city officials conferred again today with Gov. Lehman and bankers in search of a solution to a dire fiscal problem.

The city needs $25,000,000 to pay off its workers Friday and at least $72,000,000 to carry it through the Nov. 1 pay day.

From Gov. Lehman and Mayor O'Brien it was learned that an agreement was expected from today's conference and when night settled on the banking representatives gathered in the Lehman residence indications were given that bankers would agree to loan on the assurance of municipal retirements and state aid.

Banking interests represented at the meeting included the most important financial houses of New York: J. P. Morgan & Co., the Chase National Bank, the New York Clearing House association, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., First National Bank, Bankers Trust Co. and the Guaranty Trust Co.

Endorsing the bonus payment campaign of the D. A. V., which includes 56 whose relief is in institutions, 56 whose relief is in hospitals, 56 who are blind, 56 who are totally disabled, 56 who are insane and 56 who are totally disabled, Patman declared:

"May I offer my commendation of the stand at your recent national convention in which you state in declining not to press immediate redemption of the adjusted service certificates until the condition of the treasury warrants such action? Furthermore, I believe the D. A. V. has acted wisely in concentrating its attention to the cause of those whose disabilities are traceable to their war service."

Rat Turns to Tiger and Kills 7 Snakes

Glens City, Pa., Sept. 27 (AP)—The Mongoose, emphasis on the Cobra, has a ferocious little rival in the Rat, which can and has battled the reptiles.

He is one of numerous white rats but quite different from the pink, ratlesnake type in Glens City Chief's zoology department, the latter has no fight in him.

It seems the bellicose rat is the result of the snake family's search for meat, which aroused in him the shrewd his resentment by making right into seven young rattlers and materially reducing their numbers.

Older snakes thus waded into the rat. That's as far as they got with him, for he had wiped them out in a few minutes of a lashing, hissing, snarling battle. The rodent had pulled up his impressive tail on end and chased the two rattlers into a corner, where keepers rescued them.

The startled witness, Stanley Napierski of Elm st., Lynn, was not only scored but was ordered from the courtroom.

The case was that of drunken driving against James L. Hickey, 45 of Mt. Pleasant st., Lynn, whose car was in collision with that of Napierski.

The latter testified he talked with Hickey concerning a damaged mudguard but could give no testimony to support the drunken charge.

"Leave the court. I don't wish the air contaminated by the presence of the witness," exploded Judge Reeve. He subsequently found Hickey guilty and set a fine of $100 which was promptly appealed.

Because the coal bins in a Malden schoolhouse are chuck full, the janitors can't start a fire to take the chill out of the air these mornings.

The coal was supplied without authorization and has been ordered removed. But the contractor has not done that. Until he does, the good authorized coal cannot be delivered. Therein, from for it.

CERMAK MARKED FOR DEATH

Chicago Sept. 27—Startling testimony that the underworld had marked the late Mayor Anton J. Cermak for execution because of his anti-criminal activities and had chosen Louis "Little New York" Campagna as his executioner has been revealed.

The declaration was made by former Police Sergt. Harry Miller in the trial of Harry Lang, suspended police officer who is charged with assault with intent to kill Frank Nitti, reputed one time enforcer of Al Capone's edicts.

Under cross-examination by defence attorney, Abe Marovitz, Miller said a raid last December on a Loop office where Nitti was shot had been ordered by the late Mayor two days before.

Marovitz then asked whether Mayor Cermak had received threats from the underworld.

"He did," said Miller. "He told us of a plan that had been made to kill him because he planned to stop all gangster operations during the World's Fair."

Asked if the Mayor had mentioned Campagna, Miller answered:

"The Mayor said that 'Little New York' had been imported by the syndicate to Chicago to kill him."

U. S. ASKS DATA ON LIVING COSTS

Washington, Sept. 27—In the effort to determine whether federal pay cuts that were made under the economy act should be restored, thousands of federal employes have received official questionnaires asking them what it costs to live.

The questionnaire marked a departure from the previous methods of compiling data on which to base salary action. It was devised by federal agencies to supply more accurate figures than had been used previously in indices showing price trends.

Friends of President Roosevelt have said the old figures were not satisfactory to him. The Chief Executive was described as having told some officials one item overlooked in the old reports was high buttoned shoes, with the added remark that perhaps the need for these was not as great now as it once was.

BEAUTY GONE, MEN QUIZZED

Brockton, Sept. 27—State and local police joined today in a search for Miss Claire Mack, 19, of 275 Montello st., beautiful blonde tea room worker at Buzzards Bay, who disappeared last Saturday after returning home.

Claire, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Mack, was given an auto ride home from Buzzards Bay on Saturday by a Brockton man, who is married.

He says he left her at Montello st. and Perkins ave., when she said she wished to get a haircut.

Although her mother said Claire had no "boy friends," a Randolph youth was questioned but he said he knew nothing of her whereabouts.

Claire is five feet 10 inches in height and weighs 150 pounds. When last seen, she wore a blue sweater, blue jacket and blue skirt and brown shoes and stockings, but no hat.

WALDORF COOKS

DAY BY DAY . . . YEAR IN AND year out, those wonderfully smart skippers "out o' Gloucester," from Boston or from Provincetown, drive their small ships out to those deep blue waters from which come the finest fish in the world.

• No wonder Boston is noted for its sea food . . . and no wonder visitors to our city relish the fish, lobsters, clams and other salt-water dainties that our hardy seamen gather fathoms deep on the bottom of the Atlantic that washes our shores. These cold waters and sandy bottoms abound with fish that have no equal wherever you may go!

• But contributing to Boston's reputation as having the finest fish dinners on this continent probably is the fact that for 300 years Boston has had the finest cooks! That's the real reason, folks . . . it's not only the freshness of our fish, it's knowing how to cook it!

• Early in the days of Waldorf we realized that there was one item of food we must handle with extra care . . . fish. Not only must we see that Waldorf received direct from schooners and trawlers the finest and the freshest of the catch, but that every serving we put over our counters must be outstandingly delicious.

• And I am convinced we have done so, for year by year, our purchases of fish of many kinds grow larger. "Fish day" to Waldorf employees means extra care . . . extra watchfulness, precision and accuracy to a restaurant system already in high gear on all such items.

• We serve fish dinners in astoundingly large numbers. Bostonians like them, visitors eat a lot of them . . . I guess they are pretty good!

TAMPICO AGAIN MENACED BY RISING WATER

Copyright, 1933, International News Service.

Tampico, Mexico, Sept. 27.—The rich oil port of Tampico, ravaged by a hurricane and floods, was menaced again today by a new rise in the waters of the Panuco and Tamesi rivers.

Gen. Anselmo Macias, military commandant here who has been heading relief work, sent a wireless message to President Rodriguez in Mexico City advising him of the new threat to the safety of survivors.

The water rose again in the inundated streets of the city as rescue workers strove to care for the hundreds injured in the disaster and probed in sodden ruins for the bodies of additional dead.

Definitely established dead in Tampico and Cardenas stood at 78, this being the number of bodies recovered. Rescue workers expressed fears that many remained buried in the ruins in inundated areas where exploration has not yet been possible.

SIX LOOTERS SHOT

In addition, many persons were believed washed out into the rivers and drowned when the wall of water surged over the city in the wake of a 120-mile-an-hour gale and torrential rains.

Dealing mercilessly with looters, six of whom were shot down by the military, Gen. Macias recruited all able-bodied men to aid his troops in bringing some measure of order to the stricken city.

A check by Gen. Macias of the damage wrought by the hurricane disclosed that not a single structure escaped. Seventy-five per cent of the city's houses were completely or partially destroyed, while the remaining 25 per cent were damaged.

Meanwhile, the danger of pestilence grew despite the order of Gen. Macias that all bodies be burned immediately.

FOOD SUPPLY SCARCE

With only 400 soldiers on hand, the authorities were handicapped in their clean-up work. Gen. Macias asked additional troops from Vera Cruz.

Scarcity of food also assumed alarming proportions. Survivors were put on short rations pending re-establishment of train service.

Physicians and nurses from the public health department were ready today to fly from Mexico City with food and medical supplies.

Freed From Star

Mrs. Richard Dix, the former Winifred Coe of San Francisco, was the possessor of a Mexican divorce freeing her from the film star. The divorce, granted secretly, was awarded Mrs. Dix in Juarez last June 29.

DIVORCE OF DIX IS FRIENDLY

Los Angeles, Sept. 27 (AP).—The film colony had another friendly divorce to talk about today in that of Richard Dix, screen star, and the former Winifred Coe, San Francisco society girl.

Mrs. Dix's attorney disclosed she obtained a decree at Juarez, Mexico, on the grounds of cruelty, June 29.

A substantial property settlement was made out of court and the actor created a trust fund for the couple's 10-months-old daughter, Mary Ellen. The child was given to Mrs. Dix.

"By reason of my being busily and continuously engaged in my work and in fairness to Mrs. Dix, so that she might be unhampered socially, we both thought it well that a divorce should be had. Mrs. Dix, accordingly, employed Milton M. Cohen who obtained a divorce for her on the grounds of cruelty.

"We have, however, much in common in the rearing and education of our daughter and we will always remain friends."

Austrian Leader Bars Throne Aims of Otto

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Universal Service Special Cable

Geneva, Sept. 27.—Archduke Otto, of Hapsburg, young legitimate heir-apparent to the thrones of Austria and Hungary, if they are ever revived, will not return to Austria in the near future as a private citizen or otherwise, and there is no prospect of a restoration of the monarchy in Austria at present.

So Chancellor Englebert Dollfuss of Austria told me today. The keen, vigorous, and snappy "Little Dictator" said:

"The problem that confronts us is not a monarchical restoration, but the preservation of Austria as a state and the safeguarding of its sovereign independence.

"That is my aim and objective. The monarchists should not forget that, without the preservation of Austria as an independent nation, their claims and aspirations would wholly fall into the water. This is no time to bring up the monarchical idea of which I want to say there can be no question at present.

"We have more vital and important problems before us just now. Moreover, discussion of that question will only bring discord and disagreement into Austrian ranks."

Dollfuss said that Otto's written appeal to Austria to permit his return, as reported in the press, had not been presented to him.

Asked about the future form of the Austrian government, Dollfuss said:

"That is evolving itself out of the exigencies of the situation and new conditions. It will be neither German Nazi nor Italian Fascist.

"The situation demands new methods, just as you have found new methods necessary in America. The Austrian people are not to be without avenues of expressing their will and influencing the government. A new constitution is being drafted."

DEATH SET AS ACCIDENTAL

New Bedford, Sept. 27.—Dist. Atty. William C. Crossley is expected to order the release of the body of Mrs. Annie B. Hacking, 41, wealthy beauty parlor proprietress, today, as soon as he receives the report of Dr. George Burgess Magrath.

Dr. Magrath, who was called into the case during the week of investigation into the woman's death, last night declared that from all available information, Mrs. Hacking died of accidental gas poisoning. His finding was forwarded to Dist. Atty. Crossley.

He said evidence of the funeral arrangements for Mrs. Hackett held up because of the circumstances surrounding her death. The Magrath report is expected to bring the order for the release of her body today.

Mrs. Hacking was found dead in the kitchen of her home last Sept. 16. Because no other occupants of the house had been affected by the gas, although their stories indicated it had been flowing for eight hours, the investigation was made.

Mystery Lifted

Mystery surrounding the death of Mrs. Annie B. Hacking of New Bedford was lifted today when Medical Examiner George B. Magrath, called into the case by Dist. Atty. Crossley, declared that death was accidental.

HUDSON BOAT IN CRASH, 4 HURT

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Sept. 27 (AP).—Four passengers of the Hudson River night line boat Renaissance were injured and 127 endangered in collision with a Swedish freighter in a fog early today. None was seriously hurt.

With water pouring through a large hole in her hull the Renaissance warped up to a stone barge and the passengers, some hysterical, were unloaded. After freight had been shifted and the damaged part of the hull raised above the water the liner resumed her trip to New York, and passengers were taken there by train.

Really fresh Coffee
is ground before your eyes

By real freshness in coffee we mean natural freshness—not "preserved" freshness. And this is assured when freshly roasted coffee beans are ground to order before your eyes. Nature's seal, the coffee bean itself, is the best guardian of coffee flavor. When this seal is broken for you by grinding at the moment you buy, you know you are getting all the rich, full coffee flavor.

That is the reason A & P Coffee is ground when you buy it.

BACKER OF 'BUY' DRIVE WARNS OF PRICE RISE

Washington, Sept. 27 (INS)—Warning that retail prices will continue to advance, A. W. Zelonek of New York, economist for trade publications, today broadcast an appeal to "buy now."

In a statement issued through the National Recovery Administration, Zelonek declared a large purchasing movement during the next few months is the keystone of the NRA movement.

Zelonek told the NRA consumers' advisory board that retail prices already have advanced 18.4 per cent over the May lows. He said:

"Prices will advance as the retailers' stocks, bought at low prices, become exhausted and have to be replaced at wholesale prices made higher by increased industrial wages under NRA codes and by rising farm prices.

"It is absolutely necessary to recovery that this rise should take place in raw materials and that labor should be paid better wages. Consumers should consider this and accept such new prices as inevitable in the situation.

"Retailers should keep prices as low as they can in order to win volume of sales, both out of consideration to President Roosevelt's injunction on this score and out of a sense of sound business policy."

MAYBERRY SOBS DENIAL

ever using John J. Donnelly, one of the missing witnesses, as a jury-fixer, but he admitted using Donnelly on small investigation jobs.

Mayberry said he was graduated from Phillips Andover Academy and Boston University Law School, being admitted to the bar in 1912 and going to work in his father's office. His father, George L. Mayberry, has defended him at the hearing, in spite of broken health.

CALLED CRAFTS 'LIAR'

Mayberry said his father put him through a long and thorough apprenticeship. Since starting his own active work, he said, he has kept busy seven days a week and five nights out of the seven.

The aroused counsel brought his recital to a telephone conversation with Frederic A. Crafts, who is associated with Robert Homans in presentation of the evidence to Supreme Court Justice Henry T. Lummus.

"Mr. Crafts became heated," said Mayberry. "He said, 'Mr. Mayberry'—no, he said, 'Lowell, it will not take you long to find the names of the jurors that you bribed in these cases.' And I said, 'Mr. Crafts, you or anybody else who said I ever bribed a juror is a liar.' And I hung up.

"I received a letter the next day from Mr. Crafts and later I agreed to produce the records of the 18 cases I tried before juries in 1930, 1931 and 1932.

RECORDS DEMANDED

"But some were in a warehouse and I asked him if the matter could not be held over a day or two. The next night when I arrived home—"

Mayberry stopped short. He rubbed his hands together and looked at the floor, fighting to maintain his composure. The courtroom became hushed.

As he raised his head to try to go on it was seen that hew as crying. Judge Lummus and Attorney Hall tried to help him by asking minor questions, and Mayberry answered in a broken voice. Finally he lifted his glasses and wiped his eyes with a handkerchief.

Then he continued:

"When I arrived home that night, I found that a summons had been left for me with Mrs. Mayberry, requesting me to bring in the records of those 18 cases."

GOES TO SEE CRAFTS

In telling his own experience Mayberry told of some of the biggest cases on record here, including the Beech Magneto litigation in which he was opposed by lawyers, including Atty. Hall, his present defender.

"I first learned in the spring of 1932 that lawyers were under investigation by a special commissioner appointed by the Supreme Court but it was not until Jan. 14, this year, that I heard I was under investigation," said Mayberry.

"I checked up on the reports and found they were authentic. As a result, I met Mr. Crafts."

At this point Atty. Homans hurried out of the courtroom and returned with Crafts, who had gone out to smoke a cigarette.

"On Sunday, Feb. 12," continued Mayberry, "I went to see Crafts and told him I was concerned about reports that I was under investigation. I asked him to tell me about it."

"CRAFTS ACCUSED ME"

"Mr. Crafts said he would not disclose the evidence but said I was under investigation. He said there was no claim that I, personally, had ever approached, contacted or bribed any juror.

"But he explained that the allegation had been made that I had done so through John J. Donnelly, that they had evidence Donnelly to several cases bribed or attempted to bribe a juror.

"I asked Mr. Crafts if I would have an opportunity to oppose the charges, to be represented by counsel or to meet my accusers. He said no, but I would have an opportunity to appear before Dunbar F. Carpenter and answer any questions put to me.

"Mr. Crafts asked me if I knew where Donnelly was. I did not. He said if I knew it would be a good thing for me to locate him. If not, it might go pretty hard with me. I said I would try."

TELLS OF DONNELLY

At this point Mayberry was permitted to refresh his recollection from minutes of the hearings before Carpenter.

"I was asked if I would disclose all my records, check books, and so forth, and I said I could be glad to if they would tell me what the charges were and the specific cases," said Mayberry.

"I was asked if Donnelly ever worked for me, and I said yes, on a very few cases. He was introduced to me in 1925 or 1926, and kept asking for work, and I had him take up some small matters for me.

"Mr. Crafts asked me if I had anything to do with Donnelly going away, and I told him no, that the last I saw Donnelly was in December, 1932, and that Donnelly asked me if I had anything for him to do, and said he was going West. I think he said Detroit, and he said he would be away several months.

MAYBERRY WINS POINT

"Mr. Crafts asked me again if it were a fact I had sent Donnelly away and I said it was not a fact and if I could locate him I would bring him back.

"Mr. Crafts said, 'Do you mean you'll keep him away?' I said, 'I do not; I mean I'll try to bring him back.'

"Mr. Crafts said, 'You know Donnelly has testified here before the commissioner?' I said, 'I understood to the contrary, Mr. Crafts.'"

This precipitated a long argument as to whether the record showed any such interchange of remarks. Judge Lummus said he would allow it as evidence, anyway. Finally it was shown Mayberry was right in that it was in the minutes.

Mayberry then told of meeting a lawyer who was looking for Donnelly with a complaint, issued by Mrs. Donnelly, charging non-support. The lawyer thought Donnelly was dodging this complaint, and that this explained his absence.

FOLEY ADDS TO BALLOT GAIN

from East Boston, Charlestown and the North and West Ends.

Dense fog in some sections of the city hindered the work of the ballots to be marked by the citizens of Allston and Hyde Park.

The grand total of ballots cast by the registered Democrats of Boston and now officially counted and tabulated by these spokesmen is 6043.

THOUSANDS TO COME

These returns are as yet only fragmentary. Political chiefs can make deductions from them but only great rise in their reputations as prognosticators. Many thousands of ballots are yet to be privately and counted in the greatest effort ever made by any municipality in connection with the registration of the public sentiment by the voters themselves in advance of any important mayoralty election.

Dan Atty. William J. Foley and Frederick W. Mansfield, former state treasurer, were still running a neck-and-neck race in the returns thus far received. Foley made a net gain of only 60 votes in the 1031 divided between them in the city's count, and the former holds a lead of only 455 in the grand total.

The straw ballots increased, while the number of actual and avowed candidates for mayor of Boston receded. Dr. Raymond Shattuck withdrew from the contest as did John J. Connors. Both of them, though Democrats, announced their support for ex-Mayor Nichols (Republican).

NICHOLS IS FIFTH

Nichols still continued to receive votes from the registered Democratic voters of Boston, to whom the straw ballots are sent. He stands fifth in the list, preceded only by Foley, Mansfield, Glynn and O'Connell in that order.

Sen. Henry Parkman also found favor among the Democrats and the first vote was cast for Mrs. R. Cook, Republican, who was for 16 years state national Pres. vote was cast for Louis E. Kirstein, who is devoting himself unstintingly to the affairs of the NRA in Washington.

Watch these returns closely. There may be more striking developments as the new tabulations are made.

The results will be published daily in the Boston Evening American and on Sundays in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

O'BRIEN URGES NRA SUPPORT

Many phases of the NRA program are "out of accord with economic law," said Robert Lincoln O'Brien, chairman of the U. S. tariff commission, today in an address marking the opening of Northeastern University's fall term. Nevertheless, he urged unanimous support for it to insure its success.

"The situation in this country has reached such a stage," he said, "as to make necessary, temporarily at least, very drastic remedies."

Old-fashioned economists who object to the interference of property, whether it be cotton, beggs or coffee in Brazil, have his sympathy, O'Brien said.

Mr. O'Brien delivered his address in Jordan Hall at noon. He was preceded on the platform by Dean Carl S. Lell of the day division of Northeastern's schools of business administration and engineering. Music by the university Sinfonia band, under the direction of Prof. A. E. Whittaker, was also on the program. The opening ceremony was attended by the entire student body, which numbers 2900.

Harvard Board Re-elects Agassiz

George Russell Agassiz, '81, was re-elected president of Harvard's Board of Overseers at the year's first meeting of the board in University Hall, Cambridge, yesterday.

Agassiz has been a member of the board since 1924 and president since 1931. The meeting was the first for President Conant of Harvard and also the first for four new members of the board elected in the Spring. These four are Gaspar G. Bacon, Walter Lippman, Henry S. Morgan and Samuel H. Wolcott.

WATER QUELLS PRISON RIOT

Philadelphia, Sept. 27 (INS)—Battering inmates with high pressure fire streams while nearly 300 city and state police armed with sub-machine guns, rifles and tear gas grenades prepared to storm the prison, authorities early today broke up a general riot in the Eastern State Penitentiary.

Enraged at revocation of special privileges following disclosure of an attempted break last week, the prisoners seized mattresses, set them afire and thrust them into the corridors radiating from the central lookout post.

A group seized Warden Herbert J. (Hard Boiled) Smith, and beat him severely with a piece of steel bar wrenched from a cot.

As police raced to the prison and flung a guard around it to prevent any convicts going over the walls, firemen were summoned and entered the buildings, played streams from hose lines up and down the corridors and into the cells.

The convicts kept up their clamor for a time but finally called surrender and prison officials took charge.

Officials said the ringleaders in the outbreak were all dangerous long-termers. None escaped, guards said after a hasty check-up.

Robbers Bind Woman, Turn on Gas, Flee

Worcester, Sept. 27—Two robbers invaded a home here in broad daylight today, bound and gagged a young mother and after ransacking the house left her and her baby facing death with illuminating gas flooding the house.

A neighbor smelled gas, investigated and saved the lives of Mrs. Catherine DiSantis, 32, and her two-year-old son, Francis.

Mrs. DiSantis told police two men forced their way in, and after tying her, searched the house for money they believed her husband, William, had hidden. They left after turning on gas jets she said.

Mrs. DiSentis' ankles and wrists were tied and there was adhesive tape across her mouth when she was found.

$75,000 LOST IN LUMBER FIRE

Leominster, Sept. 27—Swept by fire that was fed by hundreds of gallons of paint, the three-story lumber plant of W. A. Fuller Co. was reduced to ashes today. Loss was estimated at $75,000.

Two adjoining factories, the plants of W. D. Earle Co. and the Tilton & Cook Co., were saved with difficulty after firemen had been called on a general alarm.

The Fuller plant, in addition to its large paint stock and unfinished lumber, also contained much finished stock. All was destroyed.

Judge George W. Anderson, retired member of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, walked into the new Federal Building yesterday.

"This building is closed to all but members of the legal profession," said a workman, as if reciting a piece.

"That's me," said the judge, and strolled on, saying, "Where can I get an elevator?"

The workman, who did not know the judge, smiled contentedly.

"Wait'll you try it," he said. "They're no workmen's elevators anyway, an' you gotta take the next corridor, turn left, turn right, take the right corridor. Walk to the left and press a button, where it looks like cloth. When you see a light coming up, start yellin'."

Inquiry

Audience heckling is getting to be an old story in the opera houses of Boston, and everywhere . . .

Recently in the showing here of "The Eagle and Hawk," there was a scene in which Fredric March shot down the German war ace—Voss.

After the air battle, when they reached the side of the dead enemy, one of the mechanics removed the goggles from the slain aviator and said the line:

"My God, its Voss—VOSS!"

And from the gallery came:

"VOSS you dere, Sharlie?"

Are You There?

Which is reminiscent of that swell story of Jim Corbett when he agreed to meet all comers at Philadelphia. He had been warned about a fighter named Hogan who was a wiz with a terrific sock. He had also been warned about the kid pests in the Philadelphia balcony. In the first round the local fighter hit him and sent him sprawling.

Instantly a kid voice from above: "Telephone, Mr. Corbett!"

Nature Dope

The flowers by any name can smell pretty lethal according to Agent Charles A. Burrows of the federal narcotic bureau.

A short time ago he and another operative noticed that several persons stopped in the Commons to smell some flowers. Even nature looks suspicious after you have been working in the addict field for a time and so the officers separated and began to creep around a bit. Presently they saw that a dope seller was over watching some horseshoe pitchers on the Commons. His customers would give him the money and then walk slowly over to smell the flowers. Apparently it had been a routine for many days. At the bottom of each plant was either a small handdug empty hole or a packet of heroin.

DRAYMEN AGREE TO LET NRA FIX WAGES

New Haven, Ct., Sept. 27—Thousands of trucks, many filled with valuable cargoes of milk and tobacco, rolled along Connecticut highways again after striking drivers agreed to permit the NRA to settle their differences with trucking companies.

The agreement ends the 48-hour strike which almost completely blockaded the principal motor freight routes between New York and New England points and resulted in the stranding of thousands of out-of-state vehicles.

SECRET VOTE ON UNION

The settlement came after hours of discussion between representatives of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters which called the strike and the Eastern Motor Freight conference with Dr. Edward G. Dolan, state NRA advisory board chairman acting as mediator. Strike leaders had estimated the number on strike at between 2000 and 3000 men.

It provided that the drivers return to work under the conditions which existed when they quit Sunday night and leave the questions in dispute to an arbitration board to be named by the employers, drivers and the NRA.

The question of recognition of the union, it was agreed, would be settled by a secret ballot, to be made by the NRA within the next two weeks. The agreement also excluded discussions of closed or open shops by the arbitration board and barred any new strike while it continues in force.

Canada to Wink at Gun Code

Toronto, Sept. 27—It is unlikely that tourists coming to Canada to hunt game who have obtained a hunting permit will be prosecuted under the criminal code for not having a gun permit required under a recent amendment to the criminal code, it has been authoritatively learned.

In a circular issued recently by Attorney General W. H. Price, magistrates and crown attorneys in Ontario were advised of the amendment to the code and it was suggested that if persons were arrested for carrying guns without a permit during the hunting season prosecution would not be pressed. It would be necessary, however, for the person to have a hunting license.

In order to carry small firearms however, it will be necessary to apply for license through General M. M. Williams, provincial police head, and receive a permit signed by him.

Elegance in Cut and Colors

Opportunity will be given the American woman this season to rival any in world in dress. See accompanying article.

This season American women have ample opportunity to rival any in the world in being elegantly dressed. Formal clothes have a spirited sophistication and post-war elegance that hasn't been equalled for years. A new slim, stately and proud silhouette emerges. Exaggerations and extravagances of the past summer are gone. Bodices are high and simple in front, daringly low in back—some so low they make you gasp after being misled by a demure front view. Dark shades for evening, especially the new grape, wine, raspberry, red and blueberry tones, prove that we've really gone simple in a regal way through the use of distinguished colors.

Practically everyone bows to the Princess silhouette. If you have curves, they'll show—so keep yourself trim if you would be alluring. Because the line of dresses is unbroken to the knee, every dress has a kick-out of some sort—otherwise we'd return to the old bobble days.

Our lady in the sketch illustrates next winter's best use of color. Her evening ensemble is in a ravishing combination, the black of caviar (it's really a deep brownish grey, almost a black) worn with the new tint of the domestic variety of caviar. This, in velveteen, with its dull shadowy surface, is startlingly lovely. In the hands of a fine designer it becomes a masterpiece.

Other evening reports that will charm you as you come on them in the shops include: A slender sheath of supple black velveteen, with yoke and long tight sleeves of rich-colored net tulle lightly embroidered with brilliants. This gown illustrates two vogues, that of using a transparent fabric for the decolletage of formal gowns and the vogue for long sleeves in the evening. In this case the sleeves, too, are transparent, so that without the embroidery you'd think there were no sleeves at all, but in some cases the sleeves are dark, the same color as the body of the dress . . . another very fashionable mode is the new use of lace this year. The flimsy, delicate varieties are disappearing. Instead, we find stiffened and lacquered laces that stand out crisply at the hems. One particularly lovely model you'll see in the shops is of lacquered lace with moulded hips, big bow drape below the knees in back, and a square cut decolletage, front and back. The lace is posed over a crepe slip cut short enough to show the ankles in front, a tendency to watch out for this winter.

CANDIDATES TO 3 ON TRIAL FOR AIR VIEWS CIGARET FRAUD

Six candidates for mayor of Boston, responding to an invitation of the Young Democrats of Boston to discuss their views on municipal affairs, will address an open meeting of that organization at Faneuil Hall tomorrow night at 7:45.

Fifteen minute speeches will be given by William Arthur Reilly, chairman of the school committee; Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley, Frederick W. Mansfield, Henry Parkman, Jr., Joseph F. O'Connell and Judge Michael H. Sullivan. The Young Democrats have not indorsed any candidate but in their letters of invitation declared that "the younger voters are less interested in party labels or prior political alignments, than in finding a man with progressive ideas on municipal administration."

The committee in charge includes A. Frank Reel, president of the Young Democrats of Massachusetts and Gerard D. Reilly, Michael Le Presti and Joseph Howard, chairmen respectively of the Boston, Ward 8, and Roslindale branches of the junior organization.

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 27—Three men, all of Boston, are on trial in superior court charged with swindling Ridgefield and Bridgeport merchants out of almost $200 by sales of faked cases of cigarets.

The trio, John Williams, 37, Martin Walsh, 39, and William J. Baldwin, were arrested recently in Boston and returned here for trial. They asserted they were innocent.

Charles Sparrow of Bridgeport, testified he was sold 52 cases of cigarets for $2510. He said that there were enough bonafide packages in the cases to persuade him that he was getting full cases.

KANE CO. CHIEF PRAISES STAFF

Two hundred employes of the Kane Furniture Co. attended the annual pre-anniversary sale dinner, given by the firm at Hotel Manger.

Presentident Harry Kane said in part:

"I deeply appreciate the loyal service of our employes. Undoubtedly we could not have have grown from one small store 25 years ago to New England's largest furniture institution today without co-operation and efforts of our fellow workers. The policy of our house has always been that the customer is always right. I think our employes are imbued with this same spirit.

"We are on the eve of our great 25th anniversary sale. We have prepared for this sale for three months, and feel confident we will be able to offer to the people of New England the greatest furniture values they have ever seen.

"We have arranged with the newspapers to use more advertising space during this sale than than for any other like period in our history."

The committee in charge consisted of Jack Gold, J. Jurmain, Robert Monteith, B. Craig, Frank Keane, B. Tabre and S. Roberts.

MYRNA LOY SELECTED FOR LEADING ROLE IN "CHINA SEAS," CLARK GABLE'S VEHICLE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, Sept. 27—Playing seductive Oriental queens never advanced Myrna Loy a nickel's worth. She was catalogued as a type and there she stayed until one fine day she put her foot down and said no more Oriental ladies of uncertain virtue for me. From that moment the Loy fortunes changed, until now Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer are talking stardom for her.

She gets headline honors with Clark Gable in "China Seas," her first picture under the new label just handed her. "China Seas" has been a long time around the studios, for many months it was announced as Gable picture but never definitely set for production. It's the only big picture left on the lot for a few days.

Pee Reinaud was on location when he put Ginger Rogers, Louella O. Parsons and Pert Kelton in the same Radio picture, "Strictly Dynamite," based on a stage play by Robert Garland and Russel Crouse. These two girls are certain to be the up grade on for an excellent performance and that means hard work for Ginger, but Ginger has the entertaining role with William Gargan, who hasn't been on badly for himself this past year. E. E. Swanson, formerly of College Humor, is the producer of "Strictly Dynamite," which has a new and unusual plot.

Just up Main street from the site of the beautiful Mexican charmer who camps Pancho Villa is much in the air. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have waited for Miss Mayo to return from Honolulu to invite her to go to Mexico with the "Viva Villa" company. Howard Hawks, who left the direction of "The Prizefighter and the Lady" to spend all of his time on the Mexican classic, has already left for Mexico to begin work.

There's no kidding Dr. Cecil Reynolds, eminent movie specialist in the medical profession. Dr. Cecil would give up the most important operation in the world to play in a movie. His next role is the heavy in Charlie Chaplin's next picture. My understanding is that there are only three gentlemen parts. Paulette Goddard for the feminine lead and Charlie in the well-known tramp character that he created so long ago.

A Line or Two

Elissa Landi collapsed on the set of "By Candlelight." Nerves" is given as the reason for her breakdown. Rumors are being circulated her in the hope that she will be able to return to Universal in a few days. Acting days are over for Max Baer, temporarily at least. He finishes. This floodlights and the Lady" this week and leaves immediately for San Francisco to join Jack Dempsey. They will renew their appearances with Baer as the fighter and Dempsey as the referee. Chatter around from Mae Murray that the dance at the Colony Club with Pat Lahaven was a reunion number. Mr. Lahaven is engaged to a beautiful Spanish lady and there is no romance. Another prominent couple, Darryl Zanuck and the William Goetzes have issued invitations for an old fashioned Boosers, or dance ball next Saturday night.

Rainbow's End Showed Gold, but Digging Was Long Job

By HARRIS MORGAN

There is more than the eagle's scream to this NRA prosperity. At the moment there are at least five theaters giving evidence of the New Deal's realities. For one, there is the Majestic, something of a showman's miracle, if you ask me . . . And the reason? Well, you'll have to do the explaining.

The show is "Damaged Lives." Whatever may be the cause of its great appeal and resulting box office success, there is a story back of its presentation—Boston's first American effort to get the offering—that has a Horatio Alger slant. I like true life narratives of men who conquer difficulties. This film has that kind of background.

Dr. Gordon Bates, noted social hygiene expert, wrote the script. Again and again it was turned down. You have heard of the Cohns in Hollywood activities—Harry, Jack and Maxwell. The first two are the big chiefs of Columbia; Maxwell is head of the Walton corporation. In the course of time the sketch of the famous doctor fell under his eyes. Cohn summoned in his partner, Jay J. Allen. He said something like this:

"Jay, here is a not to crack—Hollywood never did anything like this. It appeals to me, but I will take more than our money to produce it."

And what was Irish "Courage," said Cohn.

It was a gamble. It has so many censure axes in the way of human frailties were other angles to consider. Reaction of social hygiene bodies, for one thing. There the reception was enthusiastic. Censorship, was another. And you may accord the courage of the two producers due praise when you realize that not only, in time, was the film passed, but it is permitted to be shown on a Sunday.

The public solves the riddle. The picture looks like one of the biggest financial successes of the season.

Miladi Sees Trouble Ahead

"OPERATOR 13"

Southern Spies Mourn at News From Battle of Gettysburg

READ THIS FIRST

Gail Loveless, beautiful Operator 13 of the Federal Secret Service, clashed wits and wills more than once with Captain Jack Gailliard, handsome and gallant Confederate spy, as they played their intricate game of deceit and subterfuge, with the fate of armies in the balance and their own lives always at stake. And they discovered they were deeply in love and planned to marry if death spared them until the war should end.

Almost on the heels of that engagement Gail Loveless was sent to capture, kill or drive across the Canadian border Captain Jack Gailliard, who had travelled north to organize secret enemies of the Union for a great revolt timed to begin when the compulsory draft went into effect. In New York Operator 13 trapped Gailliard and stole his confidential papers. He prepared to flee to Montreal and she, knowing he would otherwise almost certainly be captured and hanged, rode with him on the train, vouching for him to her fellow Secret Service operators.

But Gailliard refused to give her his parole and go to Canada, abandoning his operations for the Confederacy, and when she handcuffed him to herself he leaped off the train with her in his arms, freed himself and escaped. She followed him back to New York, still in love with him but determined to capture and humiliate him thoroughly, but for weeks was unable to find any trace of him.

Then in a theatre, she heard Clive Andrews, a young Virginian, mention Claire Quilter, known to be a Confederate spy, and so she set about to captivate Andrews, hoping to worm secrets out of him. She was dressed at the time to represent a girl of the streets. Suspicious, he left her, but she followed him

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan Production made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Marion Davies.)

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

The hack followed, horse walking, as young Mr. Andrews continued on down the dusky street to University pl., and south to 8th st. and Clinton pl.

At No. 123 he mounted the steps. It was a boarding house. He let himself in with a latch-key. Operator 13 saw him no more that night.

The next morning a shabby, gray-haired maiden lady in spectacles who said she was a school teacher from Princess Anne, driven out by war, and that her name was Miss Lydia Warfield Trimble, called at 123 Clinton place to inquire timidly about lodgings.

There was none to be had, it appeared, but Miss Trimble might get meals there.

MISS QUILTER

"I'm Miss Claire Quilter," she said, smiling; "I heard here; and I know there's no room except at table. I'm truly sorry, ma'am."

"Oh dear!" said Operator 13 in gentle perplexity behind her spectacles.

"The meals are very nice," remarked Miss Quilter. "Real Southern cooking."

"I've had none recently," said the shabby school teacher wistfully.

There was always a little quaver in her voice, and the peering expression of her nearsighted eyes through the spectacles was painful in its earnestness.

"Breakfast is ready now," suggested Miss Quilter; "lay off your shawl and bunnit and try Mrs. Dorn's fried mush."

So Operator 13, arm in arm with Claire Quilter, descended to the basement dining room and was made ceremoniously acquainted with several other boarders, and with the pallid landlady, a thin, fretful Virginia gentlewoman named Mrs. Carter Dorn.

It was a lavish breakfast and a fried one. But what interested the gray-haired school teacher from Princess Anne was Mr. Clive Andrews, opposite her, eating fried mush, bacon, eggs and chicken a la Maryland.

It did not take long for the quiet, well-behaved little company to detect in Miss Lydia Warfield Trimble, of Princess Anne, another pathetic victim of Yankee barbarity. Operator 13 attended to that.

DELICATE TOUCH

It was nicely done on their part; no vulgar snooping or impudent curiosity, and on Operator 13's part, merely a hint of patient resignation and a trace of pinched suffering on a Virginia schoolteacher's gentle, sensitive face.

Before breakfast ended conversation became less guarded, though never careless. Somebody mentioned Chancellorsville, and there were quiet smiles.

But timid Miss Trimble ventured to inquire tremulously:

"Was Chancellorsville worth the cost? First Ashby died, then young Feiham; and now Jackson is gone—three armed companies fighting God's own war. And Lee and Stuart alone are left us."

After breakfast, very softly at the piano, Mr. Andrews played and sang: "The tyrant foot is on thy shore." Then he went away.

He had business downtown, he said.

The other boarders, too, assumed hats or "bunnits" and went their several ways, excepting only Claire Quilter, who remained to chat with the faded schoolteacher from Princess Anne who had taught school in Berkley until the recital authorities decided she was teaching sedition also, and sent her packing.

She and Claire discovered mutual friends in Princess Anne and also in Culpeper. And it was then Operator 13 learned that Antonia Ford was going to marry the Yankee provost officer who had arrested her.

"How can she?" protested Miss Trimble.

"Orderly Yankee," murmured Claire Quilter. "I declare I can't understand it!"

"I've a nephew in Norfolk," quavered poor Miss Trimble. "He'd send me money to live on if he knew where I am. But the Yankees opened all the letters I wrote him, and they threaten to arrest me if I write any more."

"Well," said Claire, "I am going to Norfolk—on business. I could take a letter for you!"

"But you has to have a pass," fretted Virginia gentlewoman named Mrs. Carter Dorn.

"I have a pass. I go and come as I choose—every two or three weeks."

The school teacher marveled.

"Oh," said the girl, "I go as Mrs. Andrews. Clive Andrews—you saw him at breakfast—passes as my husband. The only trouble is he's always trying to make love."

"Does he go to Norfolk with you?"

"No; he has business here." The girl laid a warning finger across her full, red lips and smiled as young Mr. Andrews reentered the parlor. He looked politely but intently at poor Miss Trimble.

"Oh," said Claire, "you needn't be suspicious, Clive. She is one of the Princess Anne Trimbles, and is intimate with the Fords and Blythes of Culpeper."

Andrews bowed very nicely. "I was not suspicious, ma'am. But we are a very united, though unrelated, family here at 123. And a strange face, you know——"

"Why did you come back?" asked Claire coldly.

"I forgot my walking stick."

FLIPPANT SPEECH

"Except your grandmother," rejoined that slangy young lady. "Go and tell Jack Gailliard what happened last evening." She turned to Miss Trimble, who seemed a little shocked. "Mr. Andrews met a flibbity-jibbity girl last evening who pretended to be acquainted with me and with Captain Gailliard; it has frightened him nearly to death."

Andrews turned fiery red. "I suppose you are joking, ma'am."

"Well, you, I am, Clive. Nobody doubts your courage; and I really do agree with you that this creature—whoever she may be—is a Yankee spy. So run away and warn Capt. Gailliard; and don't flirt with any more strange ladies."

He was very much put out, but he took polite leave of them.

Miss Trimble also rose to make her adieu, promising to take her meals at 123 in future. When she descended the steps Andrews was just turning the corner toward Washington pl.

Operator 13 dared not hurry. She was barely in time to see him turn eastward again toward Broadway. If only there were a hack in sight! But there was none. And at Broadway and 8th st. the boy had vanished into the crowd.

Operator 13 went back to St. George's Place to wash off the makeup and remove spectacles and wig and Paisley shawl and rusty skirt and prunellas, and dress her prettiest for a hired carriage. Over in Central Park, where, as it was understood, many young bucks of Southern ancestry took their morning exercise a-horse. But none among them that she ever trailed showed any suspicious activities and she never yet had seen John Gailliard there a-riding at his ease and pleasure.

And every day thereafter she took dinner and supper at 123 Clinton place and never learned more than she had learned the first day she set foot there.

Late in June it was rumored that Lee had started south, and all the militia regiments in New York City departed with their music playing to help repel the Rebel invaders. On Friday, June 26, Lee was in Chambersburg, Pa. The invasion had begun.

On June 30, the Union and Confederate armies rolled toward each other like two huge storm clouds. At 8 o'clock in the morning of the first of July came the first flash of lightning and the first reverberation of thunder. Then the great storm of battle broke, shaking the civilized world.

The stifling night of July 1 the New York newsboys made darkness hideous with their cabin yelps. Operator 13, already ahead, got up and went down to the front door in her nightgown to get the gown to buy a paper. It was the first day of the Battle of Gettysburg, and the end of everything was beginning with Union disaster once more.

On Thursday the North knew that the great battle was continuing.

Hooker was gone. Meade commanded. His First and Seventh Army Corps had been cut to pieces in Wednesday's fighting. And by Thursday night the newsboys were howling disaster again.

At 123 Clinton place quiet excitement reigned, cautiously concealed.

Poor Miss Trimble smiled palely through her tears—the professional tears to order of Operator 13—were the despair of other Thespians—but joined tremulously in the subdued cheering when extra editions of hysterical afternoon papers described the loosened furs of Jeb Stuart's cavalry.

Claire Quilter told Miss Trimble that Chambersburg was burning. It was not. "Maybe," she said, "the Yankees will understand now what a town afire looks like."

Operator 13 dared make no inquiries regarding John Gailliard; for, except on that first day, his name was never mentioned. She did he ever come to 123, as far as she could learn.

Gail, still determined to find Gailliard, plays around with Clive Andrews. To what purpose? Read tomorrow's exciting instalment.

A woman, who was going abroad, decided to bring a small gift to a friend in Germany. Placing the gift in a box, she put it next to a box of the same size. By mistake the woman took the wrong package when she left America. Arriving in Berlin, she paid a visit to the friend to present the gift. Salute to Boston -:- -:- Heralds the Show

Again the make-believe White House doings will hold the boards at the Shubert. "Let 'Em Eat Cake" comes in Monday, and its biggest stars, William Gaxton, Lois Moran and Victor Moore are seen above. In their hearts is the hope that the show will repeat the vast success of "Of Thee I Sing," of which it is the sequel.

Principals and Chorus Excel in Singing of "Lohengrin"

By MOSES SMITH

The Chicago Opera Company attracted another large audience for its presentation of "Lohengrin" at the Boston Opera House last night, though the house was not packed quite so full as on the opening night.

The principal pleasure of the evening was in the singing, both of principals and of chorus. Without exception the five principal parts were capably filled. It was good to hear, after many years of absence, the beautiful voice of France Tafuro, even though his Italianate style was scarcely suited to the part of Lohengrin, and though he did not warm up until the third act. Then, indeed, his singing was of exceptional beauty.

Charlotte Ryan's Elsa was mature in conception, perhaps too mature for what is, after all, a virginal role. Vocally and histrionically she commanded attention whenever she was on stage. An unusually striking Ortrud was Dreda Aves, who, aside from occasionally too forceful realism, sang with beauty of tone and convincing depth of feeling. Sigurd Nilssen was a sonorous King Henry, and Ettore Neva did duty as Heirsmanud. The chorus was not only reliable; it achieved several stirring climaxes.

The singing was the opportunity to hear Wagner's music, justified the large audience. In other respects, reverberation considered, it was not happy. Granted that popular-priced opera implies makeshift scenery and costuming, and one of the spectacles (which Lohengrin demands), rudimentary stage direction and an orchestra too small to sound the score. But it scarcely accounts for the failure to ring down the curtain for many seconds after the music has ceased, nor does it justify quite so barbarous a melange as the orchestra perpetrated last night.

The playing of the orchestra was a comedy of errors. After making all possible allowances for insufficient rehearsal, for missing parts (the wind ensemble had wide gaps), for lack of operatic experience on the part of most of the men in the pit, after all these things, it remains a mystery how the men could have played so loudly. Missed cues and wrong notes were all over the place. Several times the music died out, threatened to die entirely. That it continued at all was due to the heroic patience, persistence and sense of humor of the conductor, Harry Ladeck.

And yet, having said so much, I must confess that the spell of Wagner's music somehow asserted itself despite these defections. If one can give reason for last night's performance, let the Chicago Opera Company make the most of it.

Playing Tricks in Bridge Just as Good as Others

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Games dependent upon playing tricks, and not necessarily great strength in honor tricks, are easy enough to bid because of the safeguard of the minimum honor tricks necessary to provide the necessary entries and stoppers. Playing tricks are just as good tricks as others. However, when it becomes a question of a Grand Slam or Small Slam contract there enters the necessity of first round control of at least three suits if the contract is to take 12 tricks, and first round control of all four suits if it is a contract to take thirteen.

Mr. T. W. Parkin of Redding, Calif., in a recent letter, submits the hand below, played in a rubber game in which not even a Small Slam was reached although as the cards lie, it plays for a Grand Slam with tricks to spare. He is anxious to know wherein the East and West partnership went astray in their bidding. The hand:

West, Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

Dr. Copeland

	♠K 9 8 5 4 3 ♥ 5 4 ♦ 8 5 ♣ J 9 7
♠ J 10 9 2 ♥ A Q 9 ♦ K J 9 4 3 ♣ K 5		♠ — ♥ K J 10 7 6 ♦ A 10 8 6 4 3 ♣ Q 10 8 6 4 3
	♠ A Q 7 6 ♥ 10 8 7 6 2 ♦ — ♣ A Q 2

In my opinion, the makable Grand Slam can be bid provided North overcalls, as he did, with his six-card spade suit. It is, perhaps, a sad fate to have a bid designed as a defensive measure increase your opponents' gains, but then, this happens only occasionally, and we must take the bitter with the sweet. I think the bidding should go:

West	North	East	South
Pass (1)	1 ♠	3 ♣ (1)	3 ♠ (2)
Pass (3)	Pass	4 ♣ (4)	Pass
4 ♦ (5)	Pass	6 ♠ (6)	Pass
7 ♠ (7)	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) With magnificent support for partner's bid suit, game appears certain and a Slam as possibility.

(2) South attempts to interfere with the exchange of information.

(3) West is really relieved not to be required to bid, and therefore embraces the opportunity to turn the responsibility back to his partner.

(4) Fully prepared to bid game in diamonds, but desiring to disclose also his biddable club suit.

(5) West here has no alternative. His diamond suit is not re-biddable, although he can infer from East's bidding strong support for it.

(6) On the previous bidding East can place, by inference, at least the heart Ace in the West hand. The contract of six should not be dangerous.

(7) What feels sure, on his partner's strong bidding, that he holds both the diamond Ace and the club Ace, otherwise he would offer him an alternative contract at the Small Slam level. The bid of seven may require a nice reckoning of inferences, but the chances certainly favor its fulfillment.

It will be noted that the hand is made laid down.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Kindly advise the correct bidding of the following hands:

	♠ A Q 9 8 7 ♥ A K 9 6 ♦ — ♣ 8 4 3
North
♠ 9 6 5 ♥ Q 9 ♦ 10 8 5 ♣ A K Q 9	South ♠ — ♥ 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 ♦ A K 6 4 ♣ 6 5

Answer: The correct bidding is:

North	South
1 ♣	3 ♡
3 ♣	4 ♡
4 ♠	4 ♣
4 NT	5 NT
7 ♣	Pass

South's three-diamond bid is justified on account of his diamond length and the extra values of the two Queens and Knave over a 3-heart raise. There is no need for North to bid more than three spades in response and the four-heart bid over four diamonds is extremely strong. Southy's four-spade bid affirms confidently support in that suit, so that all 13 tricks are need know is whether or not his partner holds two Aces. He bids four no-trump and, finding this out, and upon receiving the response of five no-trump can go straight to seven.

Quaint Top for Pillow

By Laura Wheeler

There is a picturesqueness about the costumes of bygone days that fascinates us and makes us feel that this quaint couple of olden times are most decorative. Done in silhouette, which was so popular in their day, they become quite the vogue for our new pillows. Done in cross-stitch in black or a dark color, they stand out among the lazy-daisy and French-knot flowers that are done in a riot of color. Pattern 902 includes a transfer pattern 11¼x12½ inches; directions and yardages for making the pillow, and color suggestions.

DANGEROUS FAT GONE--50 POUNDS IN 5 MONTHS

She Feels Years Younger

"I was very discouraged after having taken off 50 pounds of fat, but with severe arthritis. I read about Kruschen Salts and am now on my 5th bottle. I have taken off 50 lbs. of fat in 5 months and feel 15 years younger. Arthritis never bothers me now. I have also induced 3 friends to use Kruschen by doctor's advice." Mrs. Margaret Hodgerson, Bath, Maine.

A half teaspoonful of Kruschen salts every morning in a glass of hot water, with the juice of a lemon on rising and fully 80% of your daily fat-making food will disappear from your stomach, bowels, hips, abdomen, chin and neck. Your whole body will be toned up, full of energy, clear eyes, active mentality, normal organ power, and a constant cheerfulness will prevail. Kruschen is a scientific blend of 6 mineral salts, each of which plays its part in helping Nature to remove the surplus fat. Kruschen is sold at all good chemists throughout the world. A bottle lasts 4 weeks and costs but a few pence. Ask for and insist on getting Kruschen. Refuse substitutes.

Don't be fat and flabby and don't be thin and scraggy. Just take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—and keep healthy and beautiful. Kruschen Salts are obtainable at all chemists throughout the world. A bottle lasts 4 weeks and costs but a few pence. Ask for and insist on getting Kruschen. Refuse substitutes.

By Betty Alden

WE ARE JUST BACK FROM A plethora of fashion shows where we tried to form some opinion as to what is going to be worn this winter in what is termed exclusive circles in the year 1933 . . . if we expected to see the hour glass figure with undulating curves and breasts that point to the moon, the symbol of Diamond Lil, we were disappointed . . . M. Hickson's mannikins were as slender and resilient as they were last season and the one before that . . .

The occasion also inaugurated the opening of the blue and silver dining salon at the Ritz, one of the most beautiful we have seen . . . the walls are a deep robin's egg blue with columns and dado outlined in silver . . . comfortable table chairs have been covered with rust red velvet and the gorgeous chandeliers of crystal and sapphire sparkled in the late summer sunlight . . . they match the glassware on the tiny tables . . . .

As always, these fashion show luncheons are the occasion for society from far and near to gather for a friendly bite and chat over the latest designs from Paris . . . and this show truly reflected the great French designers . . . elegant, different, smart and practical. Original Molyneux, Chanel, Patquin models were shown, brought direct from gay Paree and they were the last word in distinction and chic . . .

MRS. NATHANIEL EMMONS

Imagine a snowy-white chiffon gown with strands of diamante, like dewdrops, tracing an outline down the skirt . . . over which was worn an ermine coat in bolero effect with four complete little ermine creatures as collar . . . so elegant, so young and bridey looking . . . .

Or a lightweight black rabbit's hair wool, smart and sophisticated, worn with four magnificent sables in a long scarf effect thrown around the shoulders . . . .

Two-Toned Tweed and Jaunty Hat

PERHAPS A TWO-TONED TWEED IN THE rust and brown shades with peaked shoulders and jaunty matching hat, would appeal to you more . . . ?

Or an evening gown of purple crepe, slim and trailing, topped with a quilted coat of the same material . . . .

Shoulders are important . . . that much we learned; you won't go wrong on width at that point, either of fur or fabric.

Hats are amusing . . . terribly so! The more grotesque, the more chic it appeared, and feathers are placed at any old angle as long as they are placed somewhere. However, we did not see any willow plumes, nor Birds of Paradise, no stately aigrettes nor ostrich feathers . . . .

Along the ringside we glimpsed diminutive Mrs. Nathaniel Emmons (who reminds us of Elsie DeWolfe) in a well-cut black wool with white fagoted collar and corsage of mahogany orchids . . . a silver fox scarf completed a chic costume.

Mrs. Francis P. Sears was accompanied by her two small daughters, who sat up very straight indeed as little ladies should, smart in daytime tweeds . . . Mrs. Sears wore a navy blue reefer suit with dark gray sailor banded with red and blue . . . quite nautical and very youthful.

Swagger Coats of Tweed

SLIM, BROWN AND ENCHANTING, Ellen Pierce, a bud from last season's garden, enjoyed the show with Anne Peabody of Milton . . . and Bettina Eshelman and Polly Powers dropped in wearing swagger coats of tweed . . . .

Miss Katherine Endicott and Mrs. Tucker Sayward were conservately attired in street costumes and Mrs. Homer Albers was in the fashionable blue of the summer . . . .

Smart in fur-caped coat was Mrs. Royden Loring as she lunched with Mrs. Horace Dunkwater and Mrs. Adolph Leeds wore a chic black dress trimmed with dashing bow of taffeta . . .

One of the best-dressed matrons in town is Mrs. Eugene McGregor and noted in the throng was another smartly turned out post-debutante, Miss Rose Stearns, with her mother, Mrs. Frank Jenkins . . . .

Mrs. William Dana Orcutt wore a Gainsborough of brown with her beige chiffon dress and pretty Jane Smith was very smart in a grey wool with bittersweet red blouse . . . .

Annette Hollis Among Models

UP THE STREET AT CHEZ MADELAINE'S initial showing we were pleased to see some of this year's debutantes acting as models and among the prettiest were Virginia Tolman and Evelyn Weatherbee . . . .

A tall, handsome girl is Annette Hollis, who wore the sophisticated models beautifully . . . . as did Mrs. Ralph Kellogg.

Lansdale Watson

Polly Gardiner was one of the most beautiful models . . . she is making her bow this season at a tea dance given by her aunt, Mrs. Larz Anderson, at Weld, the famous Anderson estate in Brookline . . . among her pourers will be several buds form the North Shore, Alice Burrage, Nancy Whitman, Natalie Folsom, Dorothy Harding and Gertrude McGinley of Milton . . . .

From Concord we saw Mrs. John Buttrick and Mrs. Stedman Buttrick with Mary Curtis and Mrs. Richard Harwood . . . good-looking all of them! Mrs. Ralph Grey watched her daughter model in a black cloth suit and furs and attractive Mrs. George Fuller smiled gayly from the sidelines . . . .

SALE AT COX HOME -:- -:- AIDS STUDENTS' FUND

SOCIETY FROM THE SOUTH SHORE and other points flocked to the beautiful home of Mrs. William C. Cox at Cohasset yesterday to aid the sale of hand work that was held for the benefit of the International Students' Exchange. Here you see Mrs. Cox presiding at one of the tables and grouped about are Mrs. John Marshall, Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Jr., Mrs. L. W. Coffin, Mrs. George Shields and Mrs. Martha Helen Elliott. Many useful articles were on sale and Mrs. Cox and her committee report a busy afternoon.

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

BACK TO TOWN—And it is ever so important that our young people get started for school on the right foot—that is to say, with everything just so. The first few days are the most important and nothing starts the youth off with a better outlook or prospect than to be physically fit. Plenty of rest will greatly assist in getting him or her ready for the opening of school.

Another seemingly unimportant item, but in reality very vital, is the question of just the right clothes. Just as an adult is given a sense of poise and assurance by their clothes so is a child.

Then comes the problem of how much to interfere with lessons and school participation. Of course every mother should show a vital interest in the progress of her child, but be warned against too great interference. If your child goes to private school, his or her play in most cases is organized for the afternoon. All very well, but watch out that by too much organized play that precious part of individuality is not crushed out.

Selects Books

MRS. HOWARD SAWYER, of Perrin rd., Brookline, plans delightful diversions for her family. She is also extremely interested in the literature that her children read, and is very careful in choosing only such books as are worthwhile for the development of character. Her oldest daughter, Miss Joan Sawyer, has rare dramatic talent, which Mrs. Sawyer interested herself in developing.

One family, large in number, has many interesting forms of diversion. Dr. and Mrs. Robert Montreville Greene, of Brookline and the South Shore, have an amazingly large family, at the moment numbering eight. They are musically inclined, and constitute a delightful family orchestra, with Miss "Dolly" Greene, the eldest, playing the harp; Miss Helen Greene as the violinist, while Bobby, Jr., joins the family orchestra with a flute. Mrs. Greene herself, in spite of her varied duties with such a large family, finds time to accompany them on the piano. The girls are also studying dancing with Miss Miriam Winslow.

Another family musically inclined who derive great pleasure from their abilities is the family of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Coffin of Brookline and Duxbury. Miss Barbara Coffin is an accomplished musician.

At Mixter Home

ONE OF THE MOST DELIGHTFUL spots in Brookline is the home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Mixter on Clyde st. Thither after school hours the young folks fortunate enough to be included in Mrs. Mixter's rare hospitality assemble and disport themselves these early Fall afternoons in her beautiful swimming pool. An ideal spot and so gracious of Mrs. Mixter to share this privilege with the young folks of the neighborhood. She and her daughter Miss Anne Mixter who made her debut last fall, at a delightful dansant have just returned from Chicago Fair whither they flew by plane.

Miss Henry Richardson, debutante daughter of Mrs. John Richardson of Milton, is pouring at the debutante tea of Miss Gertrude Peabody. She is a charming young miss with dark eyes, a glamourous smile and wavy dark brown hair. In her afternoon tea frock of golden brown with touches of beige she is a delight to the eye, but one cannot overlook that snappy costume she wears in the morning, of scotch tweed sport coat with wide fur of silver fox, and a trig toque hat.

Miss Evelyn Moran to Become Bride on Columbus Day

THE WINTER SEASON is on in earnest and from all corners come echoes of things happening or about to happen; brides that are and those that are to be; parties, social and charitable; gay doings of the young and the wanderings of the not so young.

Columbus Day has been set apart by Miss Evelyn M. Moran of Dorchester for her marriage to Mr. James Cronin of Cambridge. St. Paul's Church in Dorchester will be the place. Several parties have already been given to wish her well.

Evelyn Moran

Miss Mary E. Glavey will be the bridesmaid and she gave a delightful reception in honor of Miss Moran, for which about 60 guests were present. Assisting Miss Celia Glavey, at whose home the party was held, were Mrs. James Moran, mother of the bride-to-be; Mrs. Edward Fleming, her sister, and Mrs. James Moroney of Dorchester.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN P CURLEY, of Dorchester, announce plans for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ailee Curley, on Columbus Day. She will wed Mr. J. Raymond Murphy of South Braintree. The wedding will take place in St. Gregory's Church, in Dorchester. Attending her sister, as maid of honor, will be Miss Mary Curley. Miss Mary Crowley, Miss Margaret Shea, Miss Margaret Kennealy, of Dorchester, and Miss Evelyn Cole of Norfolk Downs, are to be the bridesmaids. Youthful Dorothy Jennings, of Roxbury, will lead the bridal procession, as flower girl, and the usher groups include Dr. J. Lawrence Golden, Dr. John Riley, and John and Joseph Curley.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM MAY, of Wellesley, who sailed recently for Germany, have arrived in Bremen. They expect to remain about eight weeks, visiting the native quarters and ports of interest, in that country. Mrs. May will be remembered as Miss Molly Toulis.

BOOKS---A Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

TheOnlooker happened to be motoring with me recently through the beautiful Berkshire Hills. They are the friendliest little hills in the world. They seem to gather you in and fold you in their arms, accompanying your heart and spirit. It is almost impossible to think of anything unkind or base while you are in their emerald midst. We had been through them many times, and we never failed to come away with regret and a sense of loss when their shadows disappeared after that last lingering glance one sends in their direction. It was always the same—like saying goodbye to old friends.

In our casual rambling—for neither of us likes to hurry in a car—we came accidentally to a little road that the average motorist would be sure to miss. For it was one of those half-hidden turnings that seldom lure the busy holiday crowds, who are always more concerned with the king's highway than with such a leafy refuge. And both my companion and I exclaimed with delight when we came upon it.

* * *

Another moment and a white house with green shutters came in sight. It was set in a little clearing, so that there was plenty of sunlight; and we saw smoke curling from the chimney, and a friendly dog came out to see who these intruders might be. There was a wide veranda, on which an old lady was sitting with her sewing. In the near distance we heard children at play.

One has brief moments of envy if one is human. I could see the Onlooker's expression as we loitered past this place, for unconsciously he had reduced even the slow speed at which we had been going. I could read in his eyes what this tired man from the city was thinking.

"Why don't we all come to this?" he finally said. "It's the way Thoreau wanted to live. You remember how he said a man needed only a half acre of soil to raise anything he might need. Only two chairs were necessary, and if an extra guest came the host would sit on the floor."

"Yes," I said. "But they must have more than enough here, these wise people. Why do men think it necessary to go to the South Sea Islands when such luxury can be discovered right here at home, only a little way from all that civilization has to offer?"

"Because they are fools," answered the Onlooker. "Here is everything one could desire—just look at the peace and plenty of it. No grind, no noise, no pitiless iron screaming on the nerves, no tension; only quiet . . . .

* * *

"You and I are idiotic," he went on. "We fret and struggle among chimneys and skyscrapers and hot, aching streets when, for a song, we might have this, too.

"I know that gate in the picket fence clicks, and I know the chickens are good and the eggs the best ever, and the lamb far better than that you get at any hotel table. But I do want blue shutters on my house when I get it, and I could dispense with that iron deer on the lawn. Otherwise, it's perfect."

"But what would you do evenings?" I wanted to know.

"I'd read all the books I've never had time to read; and I'd look at the moon, and I'd maybe take a glass of port before I turned in."

"No bridge?" I asked.

"No; damn bridge!" he said. "Come, let's get on before I steal this whole place."

And he stepped on it, and we shot down the scented lane, back to Imbecility.

Mrs. Prince Is Hostess for Debutante

Entirely suitable for the occasion, which is a small and unpretentious country luncheon, is Miss English's modish dress of yellow woolen.

The debutante is the daughter of Mrs. Everett W. English of Center st., Milton, who is Mrs. Prince's cousin. She attended Milton Academy and spent a month this past Summer studying painting with the famous Norwegian artist, Jonas Lie.

Mrs. English and her daughter recently moved into their new home in Milton where Mrs. English will entertain later in honor of Miss English.

From there he went to Washington where he is exhibiting his horse paintings. In the spring, during the first week of polo play at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.,

Maybe YOU are the LUCKY WOMAN

Nine women out of ten suffer foot discomfort in ordinary shoes. Maybe you are the lucky ONE in TEN who escapes.

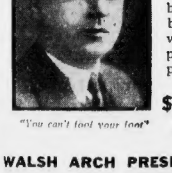
But if you are not—if you belong to the great majority—decide now to end your foot troubles.

Foot troubles do not stop with the feet. They extend their evil effects to every part of the body. Headache, frayed nerves, weariness, painful muscles very often are the result of foot trouble.

Arch Preserver Shoes have a long and far-flung record of preventing and correcting most ordinary foot troubles. They are built on Nature's own last. They give you the same natural walking base that the bare foot enjoys on level ground.

Despite the smart styles, every Arch Preserver Shoe has a hidden patented steel arch that never sags or breaks down. It is light weight but supports the weight of the body at the three natural support points. Your toes have room to flex when you walk because the innersole is perfectly flat—not cupped as the ordinary shoes.

New energy, new interest in work and play quickly result from wearing Arch Preserver Shoes. And there is no need to have any less foot-style than you now enjoy, for Arch Preserver Shoes are designed by some of America's most gifted designers.



"You can't fool your feet"

At my two stores, Arch Preserver Shoes are fitted by the exclusive heel-to-ball system of fitting, which insures that every part of the shoe fits every part of the foot.

NECKLINES FOR EVENING THAT DECEIVE -:- CURVES MAY NEED A BIT OF CONTROL

Modest High Necks in Front in Contrast With Attractive Extreme Decolletage

By Victoria Gaines

EVENING NECKLINES have a new way of being naughty but nice this season.

Just as we were all getting a bit tired of low-cut fronts on our evening frocks along come the new necklines which are high in front—right up to the neck in most cases—and daringly low in the back. So that from a front view, you look as prim and proper as a Mid-Victorian maiden aunt, while from the back, you look positively wicked.

Sometimes there's a scarf or cape over the back, so that you won't feel shocked until that Chanel manner which has been responsible for cutting out the lines from decolletage.

Color. Mauve was one of the favorites among the fashionables at a dance given from which I drank and got the evening's best compliment. There's one thing different and one of the few fashions which is proved in being a wee bit wicked is perfectly nice way.

Furs for Fortunate

There are still plenty of people who are going to be in Florida this winter. Those people interested will see some terribly smart fur capes on Fifth Avenue. Wide capes, sometimes made of two furs, are the smartest thing for dressy afternoon wear. Ermine, dressy afternoon wear. Ermine, with a long tail, is one of the favorites, but it is covered only by people who can afford to be a bad sport or appear to be not so.

Some smart young thing with unlimited dates and a limited allowance must have thought of this latest thing in ensembles. It's really a whole wardrobe-in-one outfit. To start off with there's a fur coat of nutria, lapin or muskrat—but new fur fabric that looks like beaver but costs much less. The coat is lined with plaid or plain wool and is reversible—and incidentally, it's the only reversible coat we've ever seen that looks equally well on both sides.

But the best part about this outfit is that there are frocks, skirts and accessories all made of the same material as the coat lining, and dyed to match exactly. You can get all or any of them separately—so you can have a dress and hat to match, for example, or a matching skirt and hat with a contrasting blouse. And we don't have to tell you that your frock and hat would look equally well under any other coat, too. It's a grand outfit for football games, for school or office wear, and for almost any other daytime occasion. In fact, about all you need besides this outfit is shoes, stockings and a lipstick—and you're all set for the season!

Seen at the Mayfair

Last Saturday night we saw no fewer than six feather scarfs and capes on the dance floor of the Mayfair. One in green coque feathers with a white gown; another in red coque feathers with a white satin gown and red satin gown; one fluffy white ostrich cape and another in pink, and two black feather boas.

So don't be surprised to see the a lot of feathers—feathered hats, feather-trimmed frocks and maybe even feather fans.

BRIDE AGREES TO MARRIAGE ELOPEMENT

Mrs. I. Anne Atwood, 20, of Peabody, has allowed a default judgment to be filed at Salem against her husband, Ralph E. Atwood, 22, of Marblehead, in which he admits the allegations of cruelty in a libel for divorce brought by his wife, who charges that he struck her several times with his fists.

Atwood, represented by Attorney Joseph A. Pino, appeared in Salem court yesterday and asked that the case be continued until October 10 to give him time to file an answer to the charges. Judge Frederick P. Cabot granted the request.

Mrs. Atwood, represented by Attorney Frederick H. Stevens, a former Republican candidate for Mayor of Salem, was in charge of the courtroom. Refreshments and soft drinks were served.

Mrs. Atwood has been named as the co-respondent in a divorce libel filed by Mrs. Ethel M. Atwood of Marblehead, wife of Atwood's brother, Ralph E. Atwood, 22, of Marblehead. The libel charges that Atwood and Mrs. Atwood were guilty of improper relations at the Atwood home in Marblehead on numerous occasions during the absence of Ralph E. Atwood.

Atwood, questioned by Probation Officer Frank Peterson, admitted that he had been intimate with Mrs. Atwood, but said that he had been under the impression that she was divorced from her husband. He said that he had never had any relations with her when he knew that she was married.

The respondent told Peterson that he had met Mrs. Atwood at a dance in Marblehead and had been employed by her husband for about two months before the elopement.

She denied further that in the spring of 1931, before coming to Gloucester, she had been friendly with a man named [illegible] of this city, and declared that she had not received a penny from him since she left her position.

Her denial contradicted that she had received all the fact because he feared he would not marry her, and also told him of the other man.

This Is Life

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS—

A rather unique event took place recently in the board of superintendents of the New York city schools. The event would have been amusing but it was in fact a painful illustration of a kind of thinking not too rare in America.

A New York teacher was questioned recently by the board concerning what the Boston Herald terms "a Hitler speech" in a bad purchased copy of Adolf Hitler's life story, Mein Kampf (My Battle). It was not a speech but rather consisted of a few pages made up of paragraphs and books on the part of that they teach hatred of other nations, governments or any religious race or that sort of thing. But that is just how it may have been read by the board of education. It was decided that if a professor of education who teaches in the public schools of New York city had a copy of Hitler's book in his possession he would be required to resign.

In this country one of the most important men in the world is Adolf Hitler and he has a large part in determining the course of the total population. That is why Hitler was probably considered to believe that he was a very serious man. A copy of his book was purchased in order to find out what was in it.

The professor who had purchased and read Hitler's book was no one can take exception to. The fact that Hitler has written a book and that he has a large following in Germany is a matter of public knowledge. The professor who purchased the book was merely trying to find out what was in it. He was attempting to keep informed on a subject of great importance. The suppression of all literature which displeases the dictator is the right of any nation, but it is not in the American way. Nazi book burning is not practiced in this country.

In more than one of the public schools of New York city there is a Nazi Book Burning Society. Several Manhattan high school students have been expelled from the schools for refusing to participate in the burning of books which they had purchased with their own money. The students were exercising the freedom of the press which Hitler now has suppressed in Germany.

The greatest enemy to freedom is ignorance. The Germans in particular are ignorant of the principles of freedom. Hitler, in "My Battle," points out that the masses of the people are ignorant and that they can be led by the nose by anyone who has the ability to appeal to their emotions. Hitler has taken full advantage of the ignorance of the German people and has established a dictatorship which is the most complete and ruthless in the world today.

The suppression of literature which challenges the government and incites the sympathies of that great body of thinking people who believe in the utmost freedom of the press is short sighted.

If a book may be suppressed because it is not popular with a particular group, other books may be suppressed when the majority of another group is in power. The result is that people in general lose all the precious rights of a free people, but especially freedom of the press. Hitler has robbed all the people but the Nazis.

If I am any kind of a person who stops to think, I resent the demand that Hitler's book be excluded from the public libraries from the college libraries and from educational people reading it if they want to and so on and so on. To all of these I say, read and think and if you don't agree with Hitler you are entitled to your opinion.

We cannot afford to be intolerant in dealing with the opinions of any one group of our people. It prevents nearly all citizens from any connection with foreign societies or movements to learn Hitler's book if he says what we are saying. Let us find out what we are thinking.

A cunning man said one day that he would like to rewrite the famous saying of Voltaire once put it is the act of a man which is refuse any accurate knowledge of what that man thinks is. And it is even less intelligent to refuse to consider the whole matter with a view to the removal of whatever evil there may be.

Let us hope the Nazi Youth school master's associate will stand.

Ring Lardner ↑ Sport's Outstanding
Passes Over Humorist and His
The Horizon ↓ Pullman Car History

By AUSTEN LAKE

The funny man who seldom smiled, the humorist with a tear in his mirth and a strain of melancholy through his drolleries, has passed over the horizon. Ring Lardner, original of dead-pan comedy in sport literature and onetime editor of the Boston American's athletic pages, is gone.

If he had lived, in another week he would be cramping his grasshopper knees under a press bench at the Polo Grounds and handing his gargoyle mask, with its goldfish eyes and tufted brows, to the Giants and Senators in another world series.

Thus I have often watched him, encased in a shell of melancholy, sitting on the press rim of some ball grounds, speaking seldom and lighting one cigaret from the butt end of another and, blowing little forked jets of smoke through his nostrils while pecking at the keys of his portable with stiff forefingers. For Ring belonged to the guild of newsmen who had never learned the pianoforte system of typewriting, and his type mileage was slow and painstaking, with long, motionless intervals in which he studied the advertising on the fences or blinked owlishly into space.

But most of all I recall him on that long sleeper jump from Chicago to Philadelphia during the 1929 world series when we were marooned in a Pullman smoking booth with a quartet of malt broth and a long and tedious night ahead. For Ring was a confirmed sipper of the lip-smacking type, who would cluck his tongue between swallows and utter satisfied "Ahhhhs" as the liquid splashed against his larynx and slid along his trachea. He had a system of swallowing and he would sometimes explain quite solemnly, the advantages of compressing the beverage tightly at the back of the throat so that it formed a gentle spray that bathed the tonsils and gave the discerning taster the benefit of the inside of the swallow instead of merely the mere surface taste.

Lardner Gives a Smoke Room History of Himself

Ring was an abstract philosopher who, figuratively, sat on the outer fringe of life's wheel as an observer more than a participant. But this October night as the drama increased and the night wore on, his speech became rarely nimble and his mood jocund. "I am a night-blooming cereus," he explained, as another man might under similar impulse, profess to be a curly wolf or a polar bear. And I blossom only after dark."

I remember that Grantland Rice was rallying Lardner on never having known hardship, basing his remark on the old copy book maxim, 'Men who have known great sorrow seldom seem sad,' with Ring as the inverse of the theory. "You, a professional humorist," said Grant, "always seem sad." And Lardner defended himself by saying that he had known both hunger and thirst, but always had the good sense to go to a restaurant and buy himself a big dinner.

As the train rattled on, the conversation somehow developed into a personal history in which Lardner challenged the company to name a man who had been fired from more newspaper jobs than he. For he had started his career by flunking his courses in English at the Niles (Mich.) high school and thus precluding a career in theology that his mother had planned.

His first newspaper job was with the South Bend (Ind.) Times. "It was a snap," related Lardner. "I'd drop into the police station every morning at eight to discern whether any murders, burglaries or kindred social events of prominence had occurred during the night."

An hour later he would be at the County Court House listening to the calendar of civil suits, criminal arraignments, assaults, divorces and traffic cases until noon, when he had an hour off for lunch in which to cover the fire headquarters, County Juvenile Court and commission on Public welfare. Then he'd romp back to the Times' office and dash off a few yards of copy for the early mail editions, lending a hand on the rewrite, before cantering down to the opera house to review the Whizzbang Girls in Raw Nature. And he did this for 12 fish a week, and no time off.

American Gives Him Final Kick Upstairs

But his foot slipped. He was sent to Chicago to punch hot for the religious department in covering Billy Sunday's campaign to reform the Loop, and he wrote the story in an ultra humorous vein that won him a dismissal by wire.

Well, I landed on the Chicago Examiner," droned Lardner in his deliberate style, between lip smacks and "Ahhhs." "And they chained me to a copy desk. By nine o'clock the first night I had gummed up the works so nicely that the night city editor shrieked, 'Send this simp to the sports department, where brains are no matter'."

And so on, being hooted from job to job, each time a kick upstairs with more money, until at length in 1911 he came to the Boston American. This, he said was a most beautiful job, in which he would write 200 words a day, guessing who would pitch or who would win tomorrow's game. On the morrow he would sit at the game while his wire man did all the work, shicking in such heavy mental effort as "Hooper doubled, but Speaker fired to Jeff."

But it was too beautiful to last, because, he said, "Those whom the gods would destroy they first make sporting editors."

I can only estimate how long this recital, interspersed with original verse and occasional music, lasted, but it was still in full flight as the gray dawn broke and we hit Harrisburg.

Next week, for the first time in a quarter of a century, Lardner's grasshopper knees will not be cramped under a press bench at the world series. The funny man who seldom smiled, the humorist with a tear in his mirth, has passed over the horizon! Ave atque Vale!

Adolph Thinks It Over

By DAVID F. EGAN

One tragic night last spring, a night that will be enshrined by those who loved the beautiful character of the boy, Ernie Schaaf, was killed in action by the mighty fists of a human freak named Frnnie Carnera.

Heuser had fought a serious, semifinal bout that night. In those days, he was a cold-blooded murderer at heart. When he was cut, a crimson flame charged into his heart; an insane desire crept into his head to annihilate this opponent who was torturing him.

He had been in just such a fight that fateful night, when so much happened so suddenly to the House of John Buckley. He and his veins stormed back and forth across the battle-pit, charged and counter-charged in savage flurries of heavy fighting.

He came out of his dressing room in the seventh round of the Schaaf-Carnera tragedy. He saw with horror the fatal punch. He grasped as Schaaf went down slowly, to fall into a grotesque position in the Madison Square Garden ring.

Since that night, he has had awful nights of torment when he tossed on a sleepless bed. He saw that punch in the vividness of a dream. He saw the slow descent of Schaaf to the rough, dirty canvas. He saw again the quiet, efficient nurses; the doctors who sniffed a smell of ether as they hurried to the room of death. He lived, night after night, the death of Schaaf.

In his simple, guttural English, he explained the whole matter yesterday, and I admired his courage in admitting that he was fearful when he climbed through the ropes—fearful, not of opponents, but that the same sudden fate might overtake him some black-hearted night.

He recalled the time when he struggled back through the dizzy depths of unconsciousness, after he had been knocked out by Eddie Unknown Winston. Dimly, he could remember the doctors frantically working over him, the seconds fluttering around like frightened old hens around a barn yard.

And so he is through until he can conquer this clammy fear that makes his nights so unbearable. In a short time he will be sailing back to his native "Germany," to try to forget the most damaging punch he had ever witnessed.

Do you know that Jack Sharkey was in Schaaf's corner that night? Since then, Sharkey has been knocked out by the same Carnera and knocked down by an inferior, buffoon heavyweight called Ben Levinsky.

It may be that Sharkey has framed some shuddering pictures which the world was blanketed in velvet blackness. The Squire is an emotional highly geared fellow. He had helped carry the grotesque hulk out of the garden ring as an extra mental hazard, and his self-confidence may have been shattered in that single moment.

Jim Maloney was just about to start another come-back when Schaaf was killed. I met him that bright, crisp day down in Wareham, and there was a look of dread fear in his quiet, blue eyes.

His come-back was not a success.

Dimitri Zadz was interscholastic shotput champion two years ago when at Hunting to school. Now he both puts and plays a slashing guard for Boston College varsity. After practice Dimi likes to practice a few puts before trekking showerward. The American staff photographer caught him in the act.

"There is increasing expectation that plan for liquidation of closed banks will be prepared and put into effect before long. Undoubtedly there has been some institutional liquidation in anticipation thereof but it has not been of important character. In further effort to stimulate trade activity, it is reported, the Federal Reserve will increase their open market operations, and this week's report is likely to show further gain in purchases of government."

FRESH SELLING TURNS STOCKS DOWNWARD

New York, Sept. 27—Fresh selling turned the prices of stocks downward today, with numerous setbacks of 1 to 4 points in the second hour of trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Fresh lows were set on the current movement, with volume tending to pick up on the decline.

United States Steel was sold in volume and dipped to new low on the movement for a loss of nearly 2 points. Bethlehem Steel and Vanadium also were under pressure.

American Telephone was a target for the liquidation, dropping more than 2 points in short order. Other utilities, notably Peoples Gas, also were sold freely.

Metal shares, including the gold mining and copper shares, were again sold, with United States Smelting being another 2 points, while Alaska Juneau and Dome suffered slightly smaller losses.

Railroad shares ran into further heavy offerings, with New York Central, Pennsylvania, Chicago & North Western and Union Pacific dipping from fractions to 2 points.

Among the higher priced trading favorites American Can, Western Union and Allied Chemical were hit.

The commodity markets were weak, with wheat down nearly a cent a bushel and cotton 25 cents a bale.

Sales to 11:00 approximated 540,000 shares.

In the first hour the main body of shares started irregular, then worked downward. Losses of 1 to 4 points were well scattered through the list. Air Reduction was down 4. Peoples Gas, which passed its dividend yesterday, ran off nearly as much.

Setbacks of 2 or more points appeared for American Telephone, Commercial Alcohol, Atchison, J. I Case, Industrial Rayon, International Silver, National Distillers, Seaboard and U. S. Smelting.

American Tobacco B was down 3 points. Point or more setbacks were recorded for Chrysler, Chesapeake & Ohio, American Can, du Pont, Johns-Manville, New York Central and others.

Electric power production showed a gain of only 0.3 per cent over the like period of last year, against 12.7 per cent in the preceding week.

Iron age reported that stocking up of public works and price increases had stimulated the steel market, but that production at 41 per cent of capacity was off 2 points from the previous week and just where it was two weeks ago. This survey found that there had been considerable buying in excess of current requirements, in anticipation of higher prices.

The dollar was again firm in the early foreign exchange dealings. While European quarters still were inclined to the opinion that confidential action in the London conference was unavoidable, fresh rumors that the President might espouse a "commodity dollar" program, prompted additional short covering by bear speculators in the dollar. Sterling declined a cent to $4.73, and the French franc opened a point lower at 3.94½ cents.

Directors of the United States Smelting, Refining & Mining Co did the conservative thing in declaring an "extra" dividend of 50 cents on the common in addition to the regular quarterly of 25 cents per share, notwithstanding estimated earnings of $2.21 per share in the last three months.

For the eight months to Aug. 31, which period covers three months of very poor results, net earnings after reserves of $2,504,000 were considerably more than double those for the same period in 1932. Figured against a somewhat smaller average amount of stock outstanding, the eight months' statement shows earnings for the common equal to $2.67 a share against 9 cents in the same period in the preceding year.

Sales to noon approximated 320,000 shares.

Hide Sales Made at Price Concessions

Hide brokers reported a heavy selling of steers and light native cows at prices fully one cent a pound below the previous average of the month. Tanners of both sole and side leathers have been buying very indifferently of late and as a result hides have been accumulating in the hands of the big packers. Tanners are now showing more interest at lower prices offered and additional large sales are anticipated.

Grains Are Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, Sept. 27 (AP)—Wheat's undercurrent material new downturns in price early today. Lack of aggressive buying here was a factor which decided weakness in values at Winnipeg.

Opening unchanged to ½ lower, Chicago wheat afterward declined all around. Corn started unchanged to ¼ off, and subsequently sagged further.

Cotton Lower in New York Dealings

New York, Sept. 27—Cotton futures today were barely steady, two to four lower with additional Liverpool cables offset by southern hedge selling. Oct. 9.74; Dec. 10.06; Jan. 10.12; March 10.30; May 10.45; July 10.65.

TRADE MARKS FOR LIQUORS IN DEMAND

Washington, Sept. 27—Applications for trade-marks covering spirits, wines and malt liquors are steadily increasing in number, according to the records of the United States patent office, disclosed by Conway P. Coe, commissioner of patents.

In the five and a half months since the legalization of alcoholic beer, the number of applications for trade-marks for beer has been nearly twice the total filed in any full year since 1912.

Applications for trade-marks for whiskey were six times more numerous in the period from April 6 to Sept. 15 this year, than in any 12 months since 1917.

Nearly five times as many applications for trade-marks for wines have been filed in the five and a half months since April 6 as have been received by the patent office in any full year this side of 1917.

Many of the applicants are individuals and corporations in the various countries of Europe, including England, Scotland, South Ireland, the Irish Free State, Germany, Austria, Holland, Sweden, France, Spain, Italy, Portugal and Switzerland. Some applications have come also from Canada, Cuba and Japan.

Applications for trade-marks for whisky and other distilled alcoholic liquors have exceeded the number of those for beer. For 13 years the Volstead Act prohibited the manufacture, sale and transportation of beer even for medicinal purposes.

The manufacture and sale of whisky as medicine and the production and distribution of wine for medicinal and sacramental use were permitted, and trade-marks could lawfully be issued for these liquors. Trade-marks could not be granted for beer containing more than ½ of 1 per cent of alcohol.

Month's Deficit for New Haven Is Gain Over 1932

New Haven Railroad's deficit, reported today for the month of August of $126,315 is an improvement of $252,218 compared with same month of last year.

Gross revenues for August increased $378,469 over the previous year, freight revenue showing an increase of $620,183, or 20.3 per cent, while passenger revenue decreased $157,132, or 10 per cent.

Net railway operating income for the month was $629,773, an increase of $384,372 over August, 1932.

For the eight months of this year, gross revenues were $43,874,291, a decrease of $7,091,621 compared with previous year, with net railway operating income of $4,802,281, a decrease of $2,344,423.

It was something of a surprise that freight revenue should show a substantial increase while passenger revenue was off.

Boston Wool Mart Sales Are Sizable

"Sales of sizable volume have been closed in territory wools in several houses, with strictly combing and good French combing staple 64s and finer territory lines from which clothing and short French combing staple has been graded out has brought 81-82c, scoured basis, while the clothing and short French combing staple brings 77-78c. Strictly combing 58s, 60s, ½ blood territory wool is quite strong and prices tend higher in the range 78-81c, scoured basis," says the Boston office of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

$31.35 Gold Price Set by Treasury

Washington, Sept. 27 (AP)—Today's newly mined gold price was announced by the Treasury as $31.35, a drop of 14 cents an ounce from yesterday's quotation.

COTTON INDEX SHOWS HIGHER FOR WEEK

Despite the marked gyration in textile prices during the past week, the average based on the Fairchild Composite Fiber Index recorded a very sharp advance in the week. The Fairchild Composite Fiber Index gained from 74.62 to 77.62 and compares with 97.65, the revised figure for the corresponding period a year ago.

Cotton prices during the week, states Fairchild's, averaged considerably higher than the previous week. The average increase for the week was about ¼ cent per pound. Yarn prices receded slightly further, cotton goods averaged higher due to an advance in gray goods prices, while finished goods prices receded.

Domestic prices continued its uninterrupted upward trend. Prices gained a nan average of ½-cent per pound for domestic wool and an increase of 1½ cents for foreign wool. Due to a readjustment in worsted yarn prices, the average reacted.

General Alloys Has Sales Improvement

August sales of General Alloys Company, Boston, were the largest for any month since June, 1931, and profits in that month due to increased volume and lowered operating costs, were equal to those of May, June and July combined, according to G. C. McCormick, vice-president. This is in direct contrast to the first four months of 1933 when the company reported an operating loss of $14,776. At the same time, the company has improved its financial position by the elimination of all mortgage debt, a reduction of $15,599 in current payables and $35,967 in other liabilities.

Plymouth Oil Co.

Analysis Prepared by the Fitch Investors' Service

Incorporated in Delaware in 1923, Plymouth Oil Co. owns 75 per cent of the capital stock of Big Lake Oil Co. and 50 per cent of the capital stock of Lenzig Oil Co. Plymouth has directly owned a high grade interest in 55,788 acres of leaseholds in Texas, 260 acres in New Mexico and 4961 acres in Colorado; also one-half interest in 1084 acres in Texas, and 17,858 acres in Pennsylvania and one-third interest in 5465 acres in Kansas. Big Lake Oil Co. owns 50 per cent of stock of Republic Oil Refining Co. and 24½ per cent of stock of Reagan County Pipeline Co.

The Big Lake Oil Co. is the operating company in the Big Lake oil field in Reagan County, Texas, holding and operating 10,240 acres leased to it in perpetuity by the University of Texas on a royalty basis. On this property 3200 acres have been proven productive, on which there are 174 producing oil wells, with a daily production of 14,000 bbls. of high gravity oil, and 300 undrilled well locations, with 4 wells being drilled. It is estimated that proven recoverable reserves from the deep pay level of the Big Lake field will approximate 15,000,000 bbls. of crude oil, or 14 years' supply at the 1932 production rate. The company has a refining capacity of 680,000 barrels. Big Lake also operates a casing-head gasoline plant with a daily production of 5000 gallons.

Plymouth Oil Co has outstanding 1,050,000 shares of $5 par common stock, with subsidiary company minority interest outstanding of $1,000,000.

For the first six months of 1933 Plymouth Oil reported a net deficit after charges, depletion but not income taxes of $141,776, comparable net income before Federal taxes, of $146,500 in the first half of 1932, equal to 90 cents a share. Net earnings applicable to Plymouth Oil Co. stock were $1,667,008, or $1.58 a share, in 1932, compared with $825,613, or 78 cents a share, in 1931. $2,137,907, or $2.08 a share in 1930, and $2,241,391, or $2.13 a share, in 1929.

On December 31, 1932, Plymouth Oil had current assets of $2,140,609, including about $1,000,000 cash, which were more than twice the current liabilities of $970,633. There were $850,000 notes payable, due November 20, 1934.

Speculative interest in Plymouth Oil has been enhanced by a well recently brought in on acreage in Colorado County, Texas, as a gasser, spraying oil of 44.6 gravity from depth of 6,203 feet, the first oil producer in the county. Plymouth has full interest in 6,200 acres and joint interest in 4,700 acres in Colorado County.

UNITED STATES SMELTING REFINING AND MINING COMPANY

The Directors of the United States Smelting Refining and Mining Company have declared a quarterly dividend of 1¾% (87½ cents per share) on the Preferred Capital Stock and on the Common Capital Stock a regular dividend of twenty-five cents (25c) per share, and an extra dividend of fifty cents (50c) per share, all payable on October 16, 1933 to stockholders of record at the close of business October 3, 1933.

F. W. BATCHELDER, Treasurer.

Earnings of Cotton Mills Are Bettered

Textile authorities believe cotton mills will show the largest earnings in third quarter they have had in four years. In some instances it is expected, however, that earnings for second quarter, ended July 1, will be better than third quarter.

Mills are in much stronger position as result of active buying the past two weeks. A number of important plants are sold through remainder of the year. Others have unfilled orders to keep them busy through October and November.

Gasoline Prices in Houston Are Lower

Houston, Tex., Sept. 27—Humble Oil & Refining Co. and other major marketers reduced price of gasoline one cent a gallon here. Cut applies to premium and ethyl gasolines, new prices on which are 18½ and 20½ cents a gallon, respectively, including 5½ cents in taxes. Third grade gasoline remains unchanged at 16½ cents.

No reason was given for reduction, but it is understood it was made to check flood of gasoline originating at small refineries in East Texas.

Utility Earnings Up

Kansas City Power & Light Co. reports for 12 months ended Aug. 31 net of $3,410,743 after charges, against $4,163,836 a year before.

BOSTON STOCK PRICES ARE LOWERED

Prices were lowered moderately in trading today on the Boston Stock Exchange. Atchison, American Telephone, Eastern Gas & Fuel prior preferred, First National Stores, Pennsylvania, United Fruit and United Shoe were down a point or more.

Boston & Albany at 114½ were off 3½. Boston Edison was down 1½ before rallying to reduce its setback to a fraction. American Telephone was reduced an early tag of more than 2 points to about a point.

Utilities up by fractionally. Venezuelan-Mexican was up a point at 1¼. Warren Bros., Kennecott, General Electric and New Haven were down fractions. New England Telephone was off a point.

New Haven reported reports for August a deficit after fixed charges of $126,315, before guarantees or guaranteed operating deficits, which compares with a deficit of $478,533 after similar charges in August, 1932.

Copper buying abroad was in fair volume, with the price ranging between 8.05 to 8.10 cents a pound, c. i. f., Hamburg, Havre and London.

World Wheat Move Now Up to Moscow

London, Sept. 27 (AP)—The American and other wheat delegates waited in vain today for notice from Russia's representatives was ready to resume five-power negotiations over the international wheat agreement. The next move is up to Moscow. It had been hoped the Russians would announce their readiness to proceed tomorrow.

Last week the Russians said they wanted about double the export quota of 44,000,000 bushels tentatively allowed them. The "Big Four" exporters—The United States, Canada, Argentina and Australia—hoped this request would be modified.

By N. F. T.

It's good to know Fred Hoey of Boston has been tentatively chosen for the Columbia network broadcast of baseball World Series playing. Terms were reported agreed upon last night. No need for the taking of bows by those who have been promoting this particular idea in print for a year or more, but no doubt widespread general sentiment among scribes, plus the downright ability of Fred himself, has finally yielded the proverbial fruit.

* * *

Unless there is one of those blankety-blank slips between swivel chair conference rooms, he will be assigned and the diamond contests themselves, then Fred will positively hold forth. Most likely a fellow named Flannagan of Chicago will likewise occupy a "mike" position with our Mr. Hoey from the Hub. That can be called good news also. Flannagan has a Western following that he well deserves. Together they should make a great combination. There looms the happy anticipation of very little or no mumbling about everything but the games.

INSURGENT IDEA?

There has been a rather rampant brain throb racing around in the "colyum" cranium recently, namely exercise born of a desire to hear "Babe" Ruth have a radio whack at perhaps one of the big games. Whether or not either of the networks will spark on it, or whether the Bambino could actually come through is of course a question. However, they put Al Jolson up to do some horse race highlights not so long ago and he was great. Since the national pastime slugger is shelving his spikes this season, at least that's the current concensus, he should certainly make the broadcasting bosses a great World Series attraction on the air. Those who have heard him will readily agree that he has the voice quality and surely no worries exist about his knowing the game. Well, there's the thought anyway.

Arthur Brisbane, noted newspaper editor and journalist of the Hearst organization, adds his concise viewpoint and spirited opinion to the NRA drive (WBZ) in a special feature to coast address due on the dials this evening. Mr. Brisbane will have something very substantial to say as always, regarding the public duty at present.

HEARD HEREABOUTS

This gifted young lady named Kay Fayre, taking a 7:15 turn tonight (WBZ) is a natural born mimic of rare talent in addition to possessing her own distinctive fashion at song styling. Kay is being accompanied by another artist out of the local radio ranks who will be heard from more and more —namely Ruth Hanson at the piano. . .Somehow the name of Bob ("Big Brother") Emery keeps popping around everywhere this last week or so. Latest is that Bob will handle the new radio course to be rendezvoted at B. U. . .Previously, the reports had one Jack Brinkley of WHDH as the proposed professor of broadcasting. . .Harold Stern and his Hotel Biltmore music men from New York, bowing to Boston for Club Touraine patrons tomorrow night, is a note causing quite a stir. Too bad no air arrangements have been made for him. It seems his NBC contract clauses won't permit! Harold doing WHDH duty and that station appears to be the only connection open to the Touraine interior. . .Speaking of big time bands and their bosses, Eddie Duchin is playing for a selected group of pals and gals at The Continental in Cambridge tonight, following his Metropolitan Theater showing.

"BARBARA HOLMES FREE RENTAL BUREAU"

Voice of Broadway
—By Louis Sobol—

Requiescat in Pace!
(SIME SILVERMAN)

You mustn't turn up your noses if you find that each of the Broadway columnists devotes part or whole of his department to comment to the late publisher of Variety, Sime Silverman. You mustn't mind if we drop our hard-boiled pose and unashamedly hawl real tears in print over the fellow's departure. Most of us have a reason—we really loved the fellow—and each of us, in his own way, probably will tell you why. One will admit he guided him through his most trying periods. Another will confess that he never did a thing without consulting Sime. In my own case, at one discouraging interval on the old Graphic when I was ready to chuck everything because of an editor who wanted me to go highbrow, it was Sime who told me what a mug I'd be and who urged me to stick and wait for further developments. So you see each of us has his own reason for being grateful to the kindly editor whose breezy theatrical magazine actually set the pattern for the particular type of columns that we conduct.

Neither Sime nor his Variety were kindly disposed to me when I first became a Broadway columnist. My first efforts were saluted with a choice cluster of raspberries couched in the crisp Variety vernacular and I needn't deny I felt pretty much discouraged. Nor was there any let up in the weeks to come. I couldn't understand it—although I guessed at the reason—but against the advice of my friends I did not go to see Sime and learn the reason for the attacks. I thought they were unjust and let it go at that. One night at the old Club Madrid Lou Schwartz brought me over to where some eight of ten people were seated and introduced me to a nice looking, white-haired gentleman. That was my first meeting with Sime Silverman and all my preconceived notions of the fellow were upset for I had pictured him as an insidious, bombastic chap with vinegar in every vowel. He made me sit down and take a drink with him—and another—and another. It was during my third drink that I decided to become dramatic and shame the veteran. With a grand flourish I pulled out my wallet and extracted therefrom a blue-card, which seemed to such of the world as cared that one, Louis Sobol, was a fully accredited correspondent of Variety in the city of New London, Conn.

Personally, I can't imagine anything of less importance than being the New London correspondent of anything, but Sime took that card, studied it, read the signature of the editor who had signed it, the late Jack Conway, and then turned to me and said, "Why didn't you tell me? You don't know how badly I feel to think our correspondents are the backbone of Variety—they're our boys. Why didn't you say something?" He turned to the other members of the party—showed them the card and kept murmuring, "It's signed by Jack Conway." By this time (with another brandy consumer) I felt that perhaps I had been a very injured person what with Sime turning pale, every vowel shaking his head and whispering, "One of our correspondents." I didn't have the heart to tell him that as a correspondent I probably had been Variety's worst flop. For I can't recall that any of my contributions were ever used, nor did I care, particularly as long as I received that weekly copy for nothing.

The Navy and Its Critics

Col. Roosevelt Answers

Timely and effective answer has just been made to foreign and domestic critics of America's naval building policy by the Acting Secretary of the Navy, Col. Henry L. Roosevelt.

To the impudent "suggestion" from London that the United States postpone the building of certain types of ships included in this program lest their construction set a bad example to the other naval powers, Col. Roosevelt, without dignifying the source of this unsolicited advice, makes this rejoinder:

"How unjustified is this assertion, can be seen from the fact that by 1936 when our new program is completed, we shall still be 101 vessels short, Great Britain will be 64 ships short, and Japan will have in commission its full quota.

"In fact, only if we ten the full capacity of our shipyards —which would mean working for 24 hours a day—could we hope to reach our treaty quota by 1936."

The reason for this disparity between the naval strength of the United States, Great Britain and Japan is clearly and concisely explained by the Acting Secretary of the Navy in these words:

"The Washington Treaty, as well as the London Treaty, —the ratio of naval strength for the United States, Great Britain and Japan at 5-5-3.

"We have slowed down our navy building program to a dangerous point, but at the same time those nations less prosperous than ourselves have continued to build at an uninterrupted rate.

"They have realized that an adequate navy is the insurance necessary to their national existence.

"Thus, during the ten years since the Washington Treaty —a period of our greatest national prosperity—we failed to maintain our allotted position in net power while other nations, less prosperous, were forging ahead with a well-defined building program."

To those "walking delegates" for the League of Nations and its entangling alliances who contend that the United States does not need a navy equal in every class of combat ship to the British navy, these words of Col. Roosevelt offer complete refutation:

"What should every American expect of our navy if a war should be forced upon us?

"First, that it protect our shores against invasion and thereby safeguard you and yours from the horrors of warfare waged on the soil of the United States.

"Second, that it protect the great trade routes essential to the continuance of our economic life.

"Third, that it protect the Panama Canal and outlying possessions of our country against isolation and capture.

"Fourth, that it should be sufficiently strong to discourage any attack against the United States.

"Fifth, that it must be our first line of defense against enemy air raids or attacks by sea."

Although an ardent advocate of an adequate air force, the Acting Secretary of the Navy lays special emphasis upon "the value of the Navy as a protection against air raids" because of the efforts that have been made by opponents of equating our Navy with the British navy "to persuade the country that the advent of air power has made navies obsolete."

The truth is exactly opposite, as the Acting Secretary points out, because "any serious air attack against us must first come in ships to within striking distance of our coast" and "only the Navy can defeat or drive off the ships which might bring the planes, together with their large supplies of fuel, bombs, etc."

It will be too late, as the lessons of history and experience teach, for the United States to build a Navy effective enough to perform the Navy's mission after this country has been attacked.

"A navy cannot be improvised," as Col. Roosevelt truly says. "The ships must be carefully built; the personnel carefully and intensively trained, and the building of ships and the training of men can only be done in times of peace."

Fortunately for the American people, there is a Roosevelt in the White House today and another Roosevelt in the Navy Department who have the common sense to comprehend the imperative necessity of building a Navy equal to the strongest, and the courage to build in disregard of the impudence of foreign critics, and the ignorance of domestic obstructionists.

In fact, if the American people want anything well done in this country, it looks as if they would almost have to get a Roosevelt to do it.

Seeing Your Banker

The Woman's Angle

When Miss Mary E. McLaughlin of the East Cambridge Savings Bank was asked what qualities are essential to a woman for success in the field of banking she made a responsive and intelligent reply.

She said the essential qualities to success are "hard work, a strong character AND A SYMPATHETIC UNDERSTANDING WHEN OTHERS TELL YOU THEIR TROUBLES."

A bank has its elements both of joy and of sorrow.

When the depositor goes to the window with his passbook and a few dollars, he is a source of joy to himself because his industry and thrift are making him secure against the adversities of the future. He is a delight to the bank, whose assets and prestige he is helping to swell.

But when he goes as a prospective borrower, to secure himself against the loss of his home or his business, he is not always received like the welcome guest at the wedding feast. There is not always to be found that "sympathetic understanding" which Miss McLaughlin describes as essential.

Perhaps women possess this quality to a higher degree than men. Perhaps their entrance into the banking field will soften the rigid atmosphere where it exists, like the damp frost in a storage warehouse. There are now 100 members in and near Boston of the Massachusetts Association of Savings Bank Women, four of them being bank treasurers. It is interesting that these women have chosen to identify themselves with the savings banks, in which there has rarely been a failure.

Honoring a Bishop

Notable Event Coming

Early next month, on October 5, the Episcopalians of Massachusetts will assemble here to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the consecration of Bishop William Lawrence.

We hope this diocesan celebration will not be confined to the members of his denomination alone.

He has been, throughout his generation, a conspicuous figure in the religious and civic and educational life of his native State.

He is respected and revered by all, and people everywhere will desire to offer their testimonial to him on his anniversary day.

For these reasons, it is to be hoped that the celebration in honor of Bishop Lawrence will be not a routine occurrence but will be AN EVENT in which his legion of admirers all may participate.

On Guard

At the peak of good times ninety-four per cent of our trade was carried on in the home market.

A meagre six per cent of our business was export.

The home market was the source of our prosperity—and our traditional tariff system was maintained to protect that market for the benefit of our own producers, merchants and workers.

The onset of world-wide depression brought a devastating attack on the American market. Foreign countries, with depreciated currencies and pauperized labor, were able to flood America with a great variety of merchandise, sold here at less than our cost of production.

At last the Treasury Department has begun measures to defend our own people.

Emergency tariff orders have excluded a number of cheap foreign products.

Now that the policy has been established MORE such orders are needed—MANY MORE.

It is the Federal Government's urgent duty to support the NRA Buy Now movement by helping the public to Buy American.

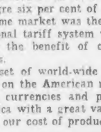
Touring New England

In Boston

A VIEW from this window of the Ritz Carlton includes the magnificent public garden and the famous Boston common, which I always want to pluralize. Also in the vista is the tragic statue of a mounted Washington, a sculptor's crowning achievement.



O. O. McIntyre

But unveiled, the public garden and famous common was tongueless. So the sculptor, as a supreme sacrifice for artistic neglect, ended his life. One thinks of Boston in ranging scale. Of Harvard on the placid Charles. Of the Atlantic Monthly floriating lavender language in a residential brown stone. Of Filene's Spa, where tireless beauties in varnished box stalls sing push buttons and purr through speaking tubes for food. Of bowling newsies in the helter skelter of pig-in-clover streets. But outstanding is a suppressed dignity not other American city attains. Nearest is New Orleans.

There's a tony look to Boston. Unusual because a cultured people are seldom chic. Leipzig, for instance. I especially like the zig-zag of alleys—all numbered so police may respond instantly to crime. There is a Newspaper Alley. Every city should have a Newspaper Alley smelly of printer's ink.

Boston has changed since my last visit, with Bill Hogg, ten years ago. One misses somehow the omniscient Boston bag. Also those midnight senders-out for coffee and sandwiches in brown sacks. Many strictly Boston characters are over the horizon. Like Jimmy Benson. Leisurely stay-outs with a gab who knew all the troupers and big shots, showing up at 10 p. m. brightly barbered and humorously honed and refitting at dawn.

Boston's diction always inspires a cut-glass one among outlanders. One may acquire an Oxonian accent, but never the pure Back Bay. I enjoy, too, the vernacular of crossing cops, especially their "deepaws" for depart and "tee-urn" for turn. After all, there's gold in them New England vowels. Look that stranger, at Rudy Vallee. O yes.

* * *

Outside rue Meuffetarde, back of the Pantheon, no tiny thoroughfare has a greater lure for shunners than Boston's Salem street, leading to the old North Church, heart of the Italian quarter. A street seething with haggling hucksters and their cries. Autos can only inch along and purchases from push carts and tiny shops are made through car windows.

* * *

The old North Church, of dusty brick, was a private entry in Paul Revere's immortal lantern swinging gallop. Ragged young alien corn boys on the running board to tell how the signal lanterns of Paul Revere displayed in the steeple April 18, 1775, warned a tense countryside of the march of British troops to Lexington and Concord.

* * *

Boylston street has the biggest of the brightly awninged sidewalk cafes. Probably twice the size of New York's largest. Chatham walk. And almost the size of the Café de la Paix. It manages to acquire a diluted continental aura, and despite the autumnal chill, was well patronized.

We dined at the highly bespoke Longfellow Wayside Inn at Sudbury—like Sunbury with a "code in de hed"—a 25-mile drive. Attendants try to give it an unnecessary and top-crusty historical bunk. One rather longs to let go a war-whoop. Food is excellently home cooked and the 17th century house well delight students of period collections.

The Road Builder

Because he talked so much of better roads;
He saw men trudging many a dusty mile
And wagons rutted with their heavy loads.
He sensed the loneliness of those who dwelt
Remote from neighbors, yet as strangers through the fall,
Waiting long months for winter snows to melt
Ere ever friend could venture forth to call.

"Build roads!" he told them at the corner store.
"Build roads!" his preachment wherso'er he strayed.
"Let friendships and let commerce find your door.
Then will be yours when highways have been laid."
But there were those who shook their heads and said;
"Upon this topic dwell's too much his mind.
Always through dust and mud we're doomed to tread.
A mile's a mile o'er road of any kind."

Now the road builder sees his dreams come true
And cruel isolation, bleak and cold
No longer prison those a half-year through
Who keep their homes beyond the city fold.
Space has been mastered and the marshes tiled.
For all that makes life sweet the way is cleared
And those of us who doubted once and smiled
Boast the broad highways which he pioneered.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

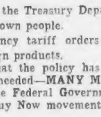
What Prohibition Did!

REMEMBER when folks used to say, "DON'T MONKEY WITH UNCLE SAM!"

Sounds funny now, doesn't it?

Like the old "Boogie Man" threat with which nurses once scared naughty children.

If you're under 20, you'll find it hard to believe that Americans ever felt that way about their country; that they once lived in wonder and awe of their federal government. Yet they did!



Elsie Robinson

Uncle Sam wasn't just a name then—a silly old name that you and your bootlegger outsmarted with every snicker-ing cocktail. Fifty years ago; thirty; even twenty, Uncle Sam was a POWER—

"DON'T MONKEY WITH UNCLE SAM!"

When did you first hear that? Was it the time old Si Smith tried to pass the bad dollar bill—and the quiet stranger dropped into town and began asking questions?

You wondered what it was all about. Why was old Si in trouble? Wasn't one dollar bill as good as another?

Then the folks told you about Washington, about counterfeiting, about federal laws and federal officers.

And suddenly you realized America! Felt vaguely—with wonder and terror, with delight and young, strutting pride—what it means to be an American! And all life seemed changed. Everything looked different.

The school flag looked different. Every day you had saluted that flag; made meaningless mumbles—"I pledgeallegiancetomyflagtoacountreeiwhichstands."

But now that mumble meant something. Now it meant that that flag—that you, yourself—belonged to Uncle Sam.

"Don't monkey with your Uncle Sam!" It was a threat—a song—A BOAST!

Are your eyes wet as you read this? Mine are, as I write it. And I'm not ashamed. If I could not weep over the sweetness and sincerity of those old days, and over the shame of these new days, I would feel myself indeed lost.

But you, who have only known America within these last 20 years, relief and, on the other, so much contemptuous incredulity. That cannot understand those tears, can you?

"What's all this fuss about?" you ask. "Why the Whoopee over Uncle Sam? Federal government? It's a flat tire! Yes, it can catch up with counterfeiters. Nobody loves a counterfeiter, anyway. But what could it do about prohibition? When we wanted to drink, we drank, didn't we? You can't monkey with Uncle Sam?" Don't make me laugh!"

That's what you, in your young cynicism, are saying, isn't it?

The youngster of today has more respect and admiration for the current crooner, tennis champ or movie comedian than he has for Uncle Sam—more faith in the power of the leading racketeers, kidnapers and gangsters than he has for the federal government's!

And it's your fault, yours and mine!

We did this thing when we tacked the 18th Amendment on to the Constitution of the United States, and then proceeded to make a mockery of that amendment by breaking it—and dasting Uncle Sam to step in.

Wets and Drys were equally to blame for this demoralization. Both camps were utterly lawless.

It was utterly lawless to force through a law which violated human rights.

It was utterly lawless to raise a revolt which violated human decency.

WE MADE A MONKEY OF UNCLE SAM!

Every evil condition in America today is directly traceable to this outrageous law and our equally outrageous rebellion against it.

WE ARE A DECENT PEOPLE. WE HAVE BUILT A GREAT COUNTRY. WE LOVE THAT COUNTRY. WE ARE PROUD OF ITS MIGHT. WE REJOICE IN THAT PRIDE—IN THAT MIG.IT.

We have forgotten those simple truths for fifteen frantic years—but we have not destroyed them. Now we are coming back—bringing our children back and driving our derelicts back—to that noble vision of Power and Righteousness which was our heritage.

We have monkeyed too long with Uncle Sam!

Once more, we will restore America's glory and power!

Can it be restored?

The man who doubts it is a fool!

The state that refuses to help is a renegade!

Roosevelt Fights Cost of Local Government

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Under the Roosevelt administration every assistance within the constitutional power of the President will be thrown to the support of a new warfare now organizing north, east, south and west.

The objective of this warfare is the extravagance in the counties and municipalities of the several states of "an outworn system" of local government.

This system, as the President reminded his neighbors of Dutchess County of New York the other day, was "built up in the days of the ox cart" and, for the most part, remains "unchanged in the days of the automobile."

Under this system, the pockets of the taxpayers are picked, urgently needed public services are starved, and communities, large and small, are deprived of that protection which all government is established to give.

Under this system, local government is compelled to "feed" from the public treasury an ever-increasing horde of locust-like politicians, whose maladministration breeds waste and inefficiency, corruption and crime.

In many parts of the country, the federal government's efforts to loan federal funds for the construction of urgently needed public works have been retarded by this obsolete system of local government.

Many counties, cities and towns need new waterworks, new sewerage systems, new schools, new bridges, viaducts, public buildings and roads. Toward these projects the federal government is offering a grant of 30 per cent and a loan of the balance of 70 per cent at 4 per cent interest.

"TAX STRIKES" CALLED

But bad local government appears to have brought many counties, cities and towns to the limits of their bonding powers. Here and there "tax strikes" have been declared. In some places teachers and other municipal employes have not been paid for many months, either because of the reduction in the value of taxable property or the refusal of taxpayers to meet their obligations.

This serious condition was the subject of an address by President Roosevelt's Secretary of the Interior and Administrator of Public Works, Harold L. Ickes, before the conference of mayors recently held at Chicago's Century of Progress Exposition.

Speaking with President Roosevelt's authority and approval, Secretary Ickes said:

"I know that people would be more willing to pay their taxes if they were assured of equitable assessments. I know that they would, without grumbling, pay on even an inequitable assessment if they felt their taxes were being wisely and economically expended.

"There have been waste and inefficiency. Bonds issues cheerfully voted for permanent improvements have been drawn upon heavily for political purposes.

"Public works have been so skimped that, in many instances, they have not been able to last for the period over which they have been amortized.

"Municipalities in common with other political entities have been in some cases reluctant to face the situation imposed by this period of economic distress.

"Padded payrolls, excessive salaries and part-time work for full pay have not been unknown in some sections of America."

POLITICIANS AGAINST CHANGE

Reinforcing what President Roosevelt recently said to his neighbors of Dutchess County, New York, about the necessity of modernizing local government, Secretary Ickes, who hails from Illinois, added:

"I doubt whether New York or any other state has a more inadequate, cumbersome system of counties, townships and municipal governments than Illinois can boast.

"The trouble is that some short-sighted politicians resist any change in local governmental institutions. The more complicated and more obscure the system, the more befogged is the citizen when he goes to the polls, and the greater profit there is in the number of jobs and the emoluments that go with those jobs."

It is apparently the firm purpose of the Roosevelt administration to carry the war for the overthrow of "the outworn system" of local governments into the enemy's country.

The opening gun was President Roosevelt's address to his neighbors of Dutchess County. This has been followed by the significant speech of Secretary Ickes at Chicago.

Boston, Philadelphia, Kansas City, and other metropolitan centers may soon expect to hear some of the same sort of "plain talk" from other high officials of the Roosevelt administration.

Human Side of the News

Fox Sisters, Spiritualists, Started Cult in this Country—"Margery," the Medium

By Edwin C. Hill

The Spiritualist Church of America has just ended its annual convention in the city of New York. Flocking to that convention came hundreds of sincere men and women who are convinced that there is a bourne from which travelers do not turn. There is almost no field of human thought which inspires, on the one hand, so much passionate belief and, on the other, so much contemptuous incredulity. That alone would make spiritualism an arresting subject.

In this country the cult received its impetus from the playfulness of two little girls, too young to be afraid of ghosts. These little girls were the Fox sisters, Kate, who was 11, and Margaret, who was 14. They lived with their parents in a plain little farmhouse at Hyattsville in New York State.

On the night of March 20, 1848, after family prayers had been said, everyone had gone to bed and the house was dark and silent, queer things took place. Heavy footsteps were heard out in the hallways. And the next night the same, and so for many nights afterward, while the little girls, laughing gleefully, clapped their hands—one, two, three, four—to signal the letters of the alphabet and talk to the intruding ghosts.

Then people began to come to the house to "sit in" at these weird conversations, and the fame of the house and of the Fox sisters spread through the land. Before long every city and hamlet in the country had its devotees, holding seances and giving manifestations of their powers as mediums.

The two little girls, Kate and Margaret grew up, toured the country and visited Europe, communing by rappings with the spirits of the departed—or so they averred. But scientists who studied them doubted and disputed their honesty, asserting that they produced the spirit rappings by cracking their knee and toe joints. The older sister, Margaret, confessed on one occasion that the seances were fraudulent, but later on recanted the confession.

The cult had received an impetus which kept it going and growing, because it went a little way, at least, to satisfy that intense longing of living humanity for some signal—some assurance—that all was well with those who had gone out into the dark.

There are few persons, who have not had at some time in their lives an experience difficult to account for by plain reason—something seemingly lying outside the field of materialism and human experience. Some of the greatest of modern scientists, Sir Oliver Lodge in particular, are convinced spiritualists. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was an impassioned believer to the day of his death, and Lady Doye clings to the belief.

Sir Oliver maintained that life is like a magnetic field. When a magnet ceases to operate it does not go out of existence. It does not "die." It merely closes up so that its activity disappears from our ken. In the same way, he asserts, life does not go out of existence when it ceases to function on earth. It simply moves into another ken where it is not perceived by human eyes except in rare instances—mediums excepted.

The most celebrated of woman mediums in the past forty or fifty years is she who is known by spiritualists simply as "Margery." Harvard professors have watched her closely, and while they could discover no palpable evidence of fraud or falsity, came to the conclusion that her performances were not supernatural.

Spiritualism in its widest sense goes back beyond the memory of man. There were soothsayers in the old Babylonian days. The voodoo doctors of the Haitian jungles, the Zulu with doctors of Africa and the Hindoos in India have done things in the broad daylight, before the startled eyes of skeptical white men, for which there is no explaining on the basis of cold reason. But there have been so much fraud and trickery and so many dishonest mediums that the average person shies away from anything which carries the brand of spiritualism.

Personally, I scarcely see why it should be necessary to sit in a charmed circle and receive cryptic messages, often in curiously bad grammar, from those that have gone on, provided, that is, that spirits are permitted in the divine scheme of things to communicate with their brothers and sisters held prisoner by the clogs of the flesh. I do not utterly disbelieve, for flat and dogmatic disbelief is merely another form of credulity. Shakespeare's is the intelligent philosophy: "There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio"—

And there is too much testimony from sincerely sensible people to the spiritual world to close like a clam shell against any beliefs in the supernatural. Man has changed but little in the last seventy or eighty centuries; but he has drifted a long way from the heads of nature, and from the forces behind and perhaps above Nature. And down through the long ages many things have been lost, many bits of knowledge, many secrets which we shall never know again.
